Art for our time

By Matthew Pearce

In a sign of the Covid times, Physical Distancing has come out a winner at the Rio Tinto Martin Hanson Memorial Art Awards.

The scaled back awards were held at the Gladstone Regional Art Gallery and Museum on Saturday, 17 October, but the lack of physical attendance was made up with a large on-line following as the event live streamed via the gallery's Facebook page.

Viewership peaked at 133, with 1041 unique viewers watching the stream within 36 hours of its airing.

Bundaberg artist Marlies Oakley took out the $15,000 top prize for her artwork Physical Distancing.

Judge Sue Smith said Physical Distancing perfectly represented how the world had been "turned upside" in 2020.

"Our world has been turned upside down this year as Marlies suggests in her original interpretation of the impact of the global pandemic," Ms Smith said.

"It is a work with a strong visual impact and a wealth of intricate detail that invites close inspection. The individual elements - cut outs from vintage sources - have been judiciously chosen to offer both contrast with each other and yet also blend into a cohesive whole.

"The hand-cutting and assembling of this work was no doubt a time-consuming process and the theme is ultimately sobering, but the work has small touches of humour throughout and reminds us of earlier good times which we certainly hope will return."

Ms Oakley, who entered the awards for a 10th year, said she initially forgot when they were on, which drastically cut down her time to work on a piece for submission.

"Because this year has been so upside down with Covid I only started work with two weeks to go. So over four days I put my collage together - it was spur of the moment."

Her inspiration for her collage grew as the work evolved.

"I love architecture, so I started off with European-inspired cityscapes and then thought I'd turn it around and have a mirror image and just do Australia, so it's like the northern and southern hemispheres," she said.

"I collected the Australian images that happened to be in black and white from vintage books and magazines.

Regional Arts Development Fund chair Glenn Churchill with judge Sue Smith at the Rio Tinto Martin Hanson Memorial Art Awards.

"I thought that it looked like the northern and southern hemispheres with different time zones, day and night, and then the black glittery area separating those hemispheres represented social distancing where we can't really get to see each other - I can't see my father in Germany because I'm stuck in Australia.

"The idea came together really well and it was so much fun to do because I got the chance to put my little quirks in there as well.

"It was fun to not be too serious, especially in the times we're living right now."

Ms Oakley said she would save her $15,000 prize money and use it to visit her father in Germany once travel restrictions are lifted.

Twelve awards were announced across four sections - Easel Paintings, Works on Paper, Three Dimensional, and Fibre Works and Digital Works - with a further six awards in the overall category.

Gladstone Region Mayor Matt Burnett praised those who got the awards off the ground.

"There were challenges to deliver this prestigious event in 2020 due to concerns regarding Covid-19, but sincere thanks must go to all the sponsors, artists, GRAGM and council employees, and of course judge Sue Smith, for making these awards a success," Cr Burnett said.

Regional Arts Development Fund chair Glenn Churchill said all 183 entries were winners in his eyes and reminded people to vote in the QAL People's Choice Awards between now and 26 November.

All artworks will be on display at the gallery until 30 January.

The Queensland Government recently allocated $5.2 million in its Covid Works for Queensland Program which is helping deliver nine projects in the Gladstone Region this financial year.

State stands with regions

By Jackie Dobson

A re-elected Palaszczuk government is committed to standing “shoulder to shoulder” with local councils to create more jobs across the state with a new $680 million dollar pledge.
This includes another $400 million regional investment in the Works for Queensland program and another $280 million for the Transport Infrastructure Development Scheme.
Premier Anastacia Palaszczuk said the funds will benefit 65 regional councils and support up to 11,800 jobs across regional Queensland including Gladstone, Rockhampton and Livingstone.
“I know that councils in Central Queensland have welcomed every single Works for Queensland round in the past and I know the massive impact this has on supporting jobs in the region,” the premier said.
This year’s $200 million Covid Works for Queensland program included $5.2 million for Gladstone Regional Council, $6.4 million for Rockhampton City Council and $2.6 million for Livingstone Shire Council.
“As a government, we have always backed local governments like we have through the global Covid-19 pandemic and natural disasters like fires, floods or cyclones,” the premier said.
Gladstone Regional Council Mayor Matt Burnett welcomes this announcement by the Queensland Government.
“This is fantastic news and it’s great to see further investment in the Works for Queensland program,” Cr Burnett said.
“I continually say it, but in my opinion the Works for Queensland program is the greatest program I’ve seen delivered by any Government.

“This program sees money go directly to Councils, helping deliver projects that make a real difference to the community by improving the liveability of our region and also creating jobs.
“The Queensland Government recently allocated $5.2 million in its Covid Works for Queensland Program which is helping deliver nine projects in the Gladstone Region this financial year.
“This includes upgrades to Gladstone Aquatic Centre, upgrades to playgrounds and a skate park, improvements to the Boyne Island Community Centre, a pump station upgrade and several other projects.”
Labor Member for Gladstone Glenn Butcher said Central Queensland will benefit from the ongoing funding partnership between the state and local councils.
“I know how well we’ve worked together and what’s been achieved so far, and I know that will continue,” Mr Butcher said.
Transport and Main Roads Minister Mark Bailey said a re-elected Palaszczuk government would continue to deliver local jobs through the Transport Infrastructure Development Scheme.
“This is $280 million over four years to ensure local transport projects and local jobs are supported for local councils and their communities,” Mr Bailey said.
The Transport Infrastructure Development Scheme supports infrastructure projects across Queensland through a 50:50 split between state and local governments.
The commitment builds on the $800 million already invested in Work for Queensland.

A paper for Gladstone
Welcome to the first edition of CQ Today, Gladstone - your new local independent newspaper.
CQ Today was established in Rockhampton three short months ago to bring a new independent source of news and information to the people of Central Queensland. CQ Today has now produced nine weekly editions that have been widely read and very warmly embraced by the local communities of Rockhampton, Yeppoon and surrounding townships.
We are now delighted to bring this first edition of CQ Today Gladstone to life.
The Gladstone edition of CQ Today will dedicate multiple pages of the newspaper to exclusively carry Gladstone stories, and other Gladstone news will be found throughout the paper as part of our broader coverage of Central Queensland news.
As a born and bred Gladstone local I’m proud to be part of the team producing this historic first edition, and on behalf of our team I’d like to thank you for reading our newspaper and supporting independent local news for our region.

Rosslyn Bay parks drama

By Matthew Pearce

The Queensland Labor government has promised to invest $2 million to upgrade Rosslyn Bay Boat Harbour with improved in-water facilities, expanded ramps and more floating pontoons if re-elected.

But Farnbrough resident Col Power, in a letter to CQ Today, said Rosslyn's Bay's problem wasn't "the ramps and pontoons".

"The problem is the parking of cars and trailers, people have to park illegally because the car park is full," he said.

"There is no room to build new car parks, so the only way forward is another ramp and pontoon away from Rosslyn Bay. None of the council or state or federal representatives are pushing for this."

Member for Keppel Brittany Lauga said the car parking issue had already been addressed.

"We recently delivered additional car-trailer parking facilities at the boat harbour, a $950,000 investment, which I know has made a difference," she said.

"Now we're committing to delivering the water-side infrastructure that will make this boat harbour even better.

"Extending the boat ramps and floating walkways will allow boaties to leave their boats for longer periods at busy times, while they walk up to get their car-trailer rigs.

"This investment will also make it less congested at busy times, which many locals have raised with me."

Ms Lauga said the commitment to Rosslyn Bay Boat Harbour was great news for local boaties and tourism industry businesses.

"Works like this are crucial to not only creating new local jobs during construction but delivering the facilities we need to make our region an even better place for locals and visitors," she said.

Premier Annastacia Palaszczuk and Transport Minister Mark Bailey joined Ms Lauga on 15 October to announce the new funding commitment for better facilities for local boaties and tourists accessing the southern Great Barrier Reef and the Keppels.

"Queensland's strong health response to Covid-19 has allowed us to get on with the job of delivering Queensland's plan for economic recovery," Ms Palaszczuk said.

"This adds to our other significant job-creating investment in transport and roads in the region.

"We've already delivered close to $810 million for better roads and transport in Central Queensland, and we've been able to bring works forward as part of a $1 billion pipeline of road works."

A tribute to beloved swimming coach Terry Fellows

By Liam Emerton

Beloved Gladstone local Terry Fellows tragically passed away on Sunday, sending a shockwave through the Gladstone community.

Mr Fellows, who was 53 years old, was scuba diving waters north of Yeppoon on Sunday morning when he was found face down in the water and unable to be revived.

Mr Fellows was an iconic member of the Gladstone swimming community, members of which are deeply saddened by the loss.

Mr Fellows had donated his time and effort to many of the clubs in Gladstone and was a key member of the Gladstone Special Olympics crew.

Gladstone Gladiators, UQ Swim Club and the Gladstone Special Olympics were all hit hard by the news of Mr Fellows passing.

Gladstone Gladiators head coach Tom Fronek said when he moved to the region six years ago Mr Fellows was a great influence on the kids he worked with.

"He was involved with the swimming club for many years," said Mr Fronek.

"I moved here six years ago and Terry was basically helping the previous coach with some work.

"I asked him if he was willing to take over the role as a junior coach and he was very happy to do that, so he was my junior coach for six years.

"He worked pretty much every day from 3.30pm till 5, looking after the kids, preparing them to move to the higher groups and competitions.

"He was very passionate about the kids, he took them as the team.

"He always created a nice group of kids who were ready to move up with me and he always did a great job with that."

Terry Fellows tragically passed away on Sunday.

Picture: UQ SWIM FACEBOOK

Mr Fronek said he and Mr Fellows bonded a lot over those six years and he was deeply saddened by the news.

"We were friends from day one," said Mr Fronek.

"He showed me around when I first moved here and he looked after me.

"He would help me anytime I needed and we became good friends.

"We bonded very quickly and I learnt quickly that he delivered on what he said he would do.

"We had a great team."

The club has tried to shield the kids from the tragic news but Mr Fronek said the club will never forget Mr Fellows.

"To lose someone is always hard," he said.

"We try not to involve the kids in it because it is a hard time for them as well.

"The club is doing all we can, we're going to have a competition if we can, so that will be a nice tribute to him.

"Everyone is using their own devices to deal with it and it's still very fresh.

"You're always expecting him to just walk up to the pool deck.

"It's just going to continue bringing back memories for me."

UQ Swim Club added this statement on Facebook after learning the tragic news:

It is with a very heavy heart that we express our condolences to all of Terry Fellows' family and friends at this sad time, and extend our thoughts to the Special Olympics family, and the wider Gladstone Swimming Community.

Terry was a very dear friend to some of our swimmers/families, and was also instrumental in both MultiClass Swimming and Special Olympics throughout QLD.

Terry assisted on pool deck at our Christmas Set and loved everything about swimming and coaching, and LOVED life itself. RIP Terry.

Reef’s biggest dump site

By Jackie Dobson

Great Keppel Island has become the largest dump site within the Great Barrier Reef Marine Park, according to Altum Property Group owner, Rob McCready.

Mr McCready said Altum can help minimise the rubbish by working in partnership with locals on the island and Livingstone Shire Council.

The statement was made by Altum after winning the prestigious 2020 Green Space Urban Award at the 60th annual Australian Institute of Horticulture awards.

“We can minimise the rubbish required to be sent back to the mainland by reusing some of the materials salvaged in the rebuilding process,” Mr McCready said.

“We can also duplicate the landfill reduction system that we used when we transformed a disused sand mine into what is now the stunning Parkridge Noosa.

“Although the 5.44 hectare former sand mine was almost entirely enveloped by protected natural parkland, the site had been used as an illegal dump for more than two decades.

“The dumped waste was a combination of construction materials and demolished building waste from neighbouring developments, as well as general waste and green waste.

“We set up a system to separate the waste, process it on site, re-use where possible and then recycle.

“As a result, 25,000m3 of waste was either reused or recycled as part of the rehabilitation of the site.

“By the end of the rehabilitation less than two per cent of the waste went to landfill.

Altum Property Group won the prestigious 2020 Green Space Urban Award at the 60th annual Australian Institute of Horticulture award.

“Unfortunately, Great Keppel Island has become the largest dump site within the Great Barrier Reef Marine Park, but there is definitely hope to duplicate this system and rectify the problem,” he said.

Altum Property Group signed a sale agreement with Tower Holdings Pty Ltd to purchase leases and redevelop the GKI back in 2019.

The revitalisation project is forecast to create 1490 jobs per year for the 12 years of construction and generate 1500 operational roles once completed.

The project is expected to cost an estimated $1.5 billion and inject $1 billion into the region Qal economy.

You just need a willingness to tri this special event

By Jackie Dobson

Women and children are being given the opportunity to give triathlon a go this Sunday at a special event targeted at beginners. Rockhampton Triathlon event organiser Michelle Williamson said doing your first triathlon can be quite daunting so the purpose of this event is to break down some of those barriers.

“The swimming leg is newbie-friendly in the safe waters of the South Rocky Pool and floaties, kickboards and flippers are welcome for both the women and junior events.

“Participants will gather in the designated marshalling area, remembering to socially distance, about 15 minutes before where they will form a line around the pool to the start line.

“They will start in groups of five or six so they can be with their friends. When they get close to the start line they will give their race number to the starter, hop into the pool and wait for the signal to go.

The bike leg will also be around the Rockhampton Showgrounds and the roads will be closed so it will be nice and safe for everyone.

“The women will snake up and down the pool and juniors will swim around the edge, giving them plenty of opportunities to grab a rest on the edge of the pool if needed,” she said.

“Women can often lack confidence when it comes to giving triathlon a go, particularly when it comes to swimming in the ocean, so we decided to hold this event at the local swimming pool.

“The bike leg will also be around the Rockhampton Showgrounds and the roads will be closed so it will be nice and safe for everyone. The run is along the riverbank.

“The triathlon will give women the opportunity to support each other in a really safe environment which also lends itself well to having the kids come along and giving it a try as well.”

Ms Williamson said The Fitzroy Frogs are also holding their very first all abilities event for people with disabilities.

“We’re looking to give as many people a go as possible and that’s to do with the all inclusive nature of our club,” Ms Williamson said.

Between 250 and 300 people are expected at the event, which is all about participation and having fun.

“At the end of the day the reward will be crossing the finish line and knowing that you’ve done something that you didn’t think was possible.”

Registrations are open until 9pm Friday, 23 October and more information can be found at <https://www.fitzroyfrogs.net/>

Men's Sheds funding offer

By Jackie Dobson

Men's Sheds across Flynn are invited to apply for the newest round of funding under the National Men's Shed Development Program (NDSP).

Member for Flynn Ken O'Dowd said Men's Sheds offer a critical avenue for social support and engagement, by providing a safe space for men to talk and work on meaningful projects.

"To stay healthy, we all need to do regular activities with people around us. This funding can help our sheds deliver programs with a strong health, wellbeing or safety focus," Mr O'Dowd said.

The new funding round will provide financial support to both setting up and maintaining sheds across the country.

Sheds can apply for funding under three different categories including:

- Health, wellbeing and events: $8000 maximum
- Shed improvements: $8000 maximum
- Equipment: $5000 maximum

Minister for Regional Health, Regional Communications and Local Government, Mark Coulton said Men's Sheds play a vital role in regional Australia.

"In many parts of regional Australia, local Men's Sheds are fast becoming one of the most important regional organisations, one where members make connections and serve their community.

"This new grant round means more funding for sheds and local communities."

Applications for the current funding round closes Friday, 27 November.

Emu Park Nippers busy promoting SOS Week

The Emu Park Surf Lifesaving Club's Nippers have been helping to promote SOS Week 2020.

On the weekend, Emu Park Surf Lifesaving Club walked around the grounds of the Emu Park Markets rattling red and yellow tins.

The team ended up raising over $1000, which will go directly to the surf life saving club.

In other Emu Park Surf Lifesaving Club news, the club were hosts for the annual WBC Secondary Schools Surf League Challenge.

Schools from Gladstone, Rocky, Yeppoon and Biloela attended.

The club sent out a big thank-you to all members who attended to help out in water safety, official and canteen capacity. Next year the event will be back at Tannum.

The Emu Park competitors were:

- Clay Valigura from Emmaus College, Rockhampton

- Calli McRae from Rockhampton Girls Grammar School
- Caden Parsons from NRHS/RGS)

- Aiden Stieg, Charlie Kidd, Josh Russell and Noah Christensen from St Brendan's College and Ailani Wakeham from St Ursula's College

Clay's team were overall winners on the day.

Calli won the Age Champ for U13 Girls and her team were winners of the percentage trophy.

The day ended with a fitting send-off for Craig Holden who is finishing up with WBC after 25+ years.

Teens dig careers expo

By Matthew Pearce

Rockhampton State High School students Livinia Rothery and Eloise Romer's eyes have been opened by the opportunities on offer at the Resource and Civil Construction Careers Expo.

Held at Adani Arena on Friday, 16 October, the expo gave school leavers, job seekers and people seeking career changes the chance to check out the employment opportunities available in the Rockhampton region.

Livinia said the expo had shown her how two of her favourite subjects, maths and science, could be used in a future career.

"The expo has caused me to look at the mining industry, it's given me a lot of stuff to think about to see what I'm interested in," she said.

Eloise, who's interested in the environmental side of things, enjoyed the opportunity to try out VR headsets and the holographics tent at the expo.

She said she would definitely encourage other kids her age to come and have a look.

Rockhampton Mayor Margaret Strelow said the event had been even bigger than anticipated.

"About 200 students had booked to come through 200 but it's been a lot more than that, with well over 300 people here at 11 in the morning," she said.

Cr Strelow said it was important to remember that the goal of the expo, held by Capricorn Enterprise, was to attract students and members of the general public who might consider a career in the resources or construction sector.

"This is really important for the Rockhampton region at the moment, we know there are huge jobs in our vicinity and more to come and we want those jobs filled by locals and our own firms to be able to grow quickly enough to deliver on those projects," she said.

"We certainly welcome the projects but the value to our community is a lot less if they're built by people who take their money back home with them.

"It's very important for our economy and our young people as well that they get to explore the opportunities of a job either in the resources sector or the construction sector."

Cr Strelow said while Advanced Rockhampton, the council's economic development entity, had done great work bringing the event together, it was the businesses that gave up their time to attend the expo that deserved the biggest praise.

"The expo allows young people to speak with the CEOs and employers directly; other times you might be one of 200 or 300 applying for an apprenticeship, here's a chance to build a relationship one on one," she said.

"Certainly I encourage people to look out for this event in the calendar next year and huge kudos for those who've taken advantage of the first expo this year."

Wade Hind, from Advanced Heavy Vehicle Driver Training and Calibre Earthmoving said he was proud to join with Advanced Rockhampton to support the civil and mining industry and the current and future opportunities in the sector.

"With the amount of infrastructure and major projects around the area the opportunities for young people to join and train are really evident and the next few months and next few years will have a lot of work and a lot of opportunity for everyone," he said.

"It's been great to see the amount of students here and particularly young females looking to get into civil construction and mining."

Cr Strelow agreed that young women like Livinia and Eloise were important to the future of the resources sector, with companies actively seeking out females for roles.

"I really look forward to the day that we don't notice when women are appearing in some of these sectors because it's just natural and as it should be, but it is delightful to see that there's good representation from both young men and young women looking for opportunities in the resources and construction sector," she said.

Independent Candidate for Rockhampton Dominic Doblo is confident in his chances in next week's state election.

"I've put has put $200 on myself at 50 to one and when I win I'll get $10,000 and that $10,000 I'll be donating straight to the RACQ Capricorn Helicopter Rescue Rescue," he said.

Queensland will go to the polls on Saturday, 31 October.

The Cathedral College's girl boarders were delighted when they received the news assistant principal boarding, Ron Armstrong, was a finalist for the Queensland College of Teachers' 2020 TEACHX Outstanding Contribution to School Community Award.

Teacher up for award

By Matthew Pearce

The Cathedral College's assistant principal of boarding, Ron Armstrong, has always been a hero to the school community and now he's been named as a finalist for a prestigious teaching award.

Mr Armstrong is up for the Outstanding Contribution to Teaching Award at the Queensland College of Teachers (QCT) TEACHX Awards, the only Queensland education awards that recognise teachers from all schooling sectors, all subjects and the early childhood sector.

Since starting his role in 2009, Mr Armstrong has increased TCC's boarding numbers from 120 students to full capacity at 190, with a waiting list.

During the remote learning period, Mr Armstrong reallocated TCC's boarding staff to on-campus roles to maintain their working hours, allowing day teachers to concentrate on online learning, while boarding staff supervised 110 students who were children of essential workers.

He's known around the school community as an exemplary teacher who cares about the whole person and is available for long hours every day to talk with parents.

Pre Covid-19, he travelled far and wide to meet with boarders' families, knowing how important it is to look someone in the eye and shake their hand if you are going to be responsible for their child.

"Our boarding parents, like all parents, want to provide the best opportunities for their children and provide them with more than they ever had, as we all wish to do," he said.

"It is parents going out into their communities and talking about the quality of education at TCC and the level of care that their child received in boarding that keeps other parents coming to us."

Principal Rob Alexander said Mr Armstrong's leadership of his boarding team ensured the school was one of the first in the state to reopen to a full complement of students on site following Covid-19.

He's also contributed to nationwide boarding standards and professional development.

"The trust Mr Armstrong has built among regional and rural Queensland communities and their families, his exceptional teaching and his courageous and caring leadership are just some of the reasons he is a finalist for the Queensland College of Teachers TEACHX Outstanding Contribution to Teaching Award," Mr Alexander said.

The TEACHX award winners will be announced at a virtual awards ceremony on Thursday, 29 October, on the eve of World Teachers' Day celebrations in Queensland.

The TEACHX Awards finalists have been chosen from a record number of almost 400 nominations across just six categories - a 60 per cent increase on last year's number of nominations, which was also a record.

Struck Oil reception boost

By Jackie Dobson

People living and travelling through Struck Oil now have better phone service to make calls, browse the internet and stay connected with family and friends.

A new mobile base station was switched on at Struck Oil under the Mobile Blackspot Program, as part of the federal government's commitment to improving connectivity in the regions.

Minister for Communications, Cyber Safety and the Arts Paul Fletcher said connectivity is particularly important following the recent spate of devastating bushfires across the region.

"Australians want to be confident our communications networks are as resilient as possible, the Mobile Blackspot Program is an important part of this," he said.

The new mobile base station was completed by Telstra and is the latest of 26 sites across Flynn to receive new or improved mobile coverage under the $380 million dollar program.

Struck Oil resident Darryl Bray said he is pleased that the phone tower was installed as it was quite frustrating having really poor service in the area.

"We now have mobile phone service at the house so we can phone out and people can phone in, it makes such a big difference," Darryl said.

"Quite often when it flooded we would lose our landline which was quite worrying particularly if we needed access to emergency services.

"It makes it very difficult to get a hold of anyone.

"Now that we have both landline and mobile telephone reception, the likelihood of this happening is minimal, which is another weight off our shoulders."

More than 40,000 Triple 0 calls have so far been made possible through the Mobile Blackspot Program.

More information about the program is available at <https://www.communications.gov.au/what-we-do/phone/mobile-services-and-coverage/mobile-black-spot-program>

A new GKI ‘Konnection’

By Jackie Dobson

An additional ferry service will ‘Konnect’ locals and visitors alike to Great Keppel Island (GKI).

Keppel Konnections will now depart the Keppel Bay Marina daily at 7.30am from 19 October, maximising accessibility and allowing more people to explore the barefoot paradise.

Over the past month, thousands have taken the 30 minute ‘overseas’ trip to explore the pristine beaches, follow the marvellous web of walking tracks, swim, snorkel, dive and relax.

Keppel Konnections and GKI Hideaway employee Eloise Chaffers said it was a welcome relief to see locals and visitors jumping back on board to visit their own backyard.

“The extra service will run from October to January 2021 and will include a complimentary coffee from Great Keppel Island Hideaway to kick start your day,” she said.

Ferry services, including Keppel Konnections and Freedom Fast Cats, have been inundated with bookings and quickly reaching capacity.

Capricorn Enterprise CEO Mary Carroll welcomes the announcement of an extra ferry service, which well and truly proves that Queenslanders are continuing to support Queensland.

“Being busy during this time is certainly a good problem to have and it is great to see our tourism operators thriving and evolving despite the disruptions caused by the Covid crisis,” Mary said.

“Our destination has been an extremely popular holiday option since restrictions eased in June, and local attractions and accommodation providers are reporting a positive trend in future bookings through to the summer holidays.”

Keppel Konnections will now depart the Keppel Bay Marina daily at 7.30am from 19 October, maximising accessibility and allowing more people to explore GKI.

To continue enticing visitors, GKI Hideaway, in conjunction with Keppel Konnections, have launched their ‘Spring into Summer’ campaign, which packages return transfers, all meals and two nights accommodation at a fantastic rate.

Scout Joeys hopping to help food relief organisation

By Liam Emerton

The Yeppoon Scouts have been out helping those who need it most this week.

On Tuesday, the Yeppoon Scouts travelled to the Food Relief Capricorn Coast Inc to give a helping hand to the volunteers there.

The Joey Scouts are working towards their messengers of peace badges.

The scout group donated bags filled with non-perishable items to the food relief organisation, which they were thanked immensely for.

The volunteers had everything ready to go for the scouts, and they had no complaints getting to work right away.

“They helped clean the shed, the chairs because of the Covid restrictions,” said Assistant Joey Scout leader Amber Watson.

“Then they helped put the donations they had given on the shelves in order.

“They had to work out where everything went.

The Yeppoon Scout group out the front of the Food Relief Capricorn Coast building on Tuesday.

“They had to work as a team because we have some short members, they had to work as a group to get the higher items up on the shelves.

“Then they packed customer orders because of how the food bank works at the moment due to Covid.”

Amber said the team enjoyed the day and she was proud of how they took on the challenge.

“They had smiles on their faces,” Amber said.

“They were reading the labels, cleaning and the volunteers got involved with them which was great.

“They responded well to it, it was something different than the scouts don’t usually do at home.

“We had them cleaning and all of the parents said that they never do that at home.”

I was incredibly proud, predominantly five to eight-year-olds, it can be a little bit hard.

“They’re used to running, jumping and climbing trees.

“So it was good to get them out of their comfort zone and there was not one complaint.

“They all got behind everything as well, so we could not be prouder.”

SES Week recognises the wide ranging work of the SES.

Making a real difference

By Matthew Pearce

Being an SES volunteer has made a big difference in the life of Rockhampton's Kirby Shannon.

Ms Shannon has been named Central Region's Member of the Year as part of State Emergency Service Week.

The Rockhampton SES member, who was nominated for the award by her peers, said she was shocked to win out of the many members in the Central Region's 68 groups.

"I've only been in the SES for two and a half years. I was looking for a bit more purpose and giving back to the community seemed like a really good way to do that," she said.

"Now I really love it."

Ms Shannon said volunteering involved a wide range of experiences.

"I've got my Working Safely at Heights certificate, my Chainsaw Operation certificate and we do search and rescue for missing persons.

"Community education is a really big one, especially at the moment with lots of storms coming up. We also try to assist the fires where we can, doing the education for them so they can be out on the fire grounds."

While she hasn't had the opportunity to do so yet, she said she'd like to assist on a flood boat with search and rescue, delivering medication and food drop offs.

"I think the SES is a great way to get involved in the community and you just learn so many skills you wouldn't learn on your own," she said.

"You meet so many great people, our group is a very tight knit community."

Regional manager for the Central Region, Andrew Wyatt, said SES Week, which started on Saturday, 17 October, was about celebrating the work of the SES.

"What we try and do every year at this time is take the opportunity to stop and think and reward and recognise the good work the SES volunteers do in our community," he said.

"The last couple of years have been a really good example of the types of work that the SES does. Not only do we just focus on floods and storms, this year we've had a bigger amount of involvement in the major fires that have occurred.

"We've also been heavily involved in the Covid-19 response with volunteers working on border security and others working at the airports helping with the screening side."

Mr Wyatt said the work of the SES was quite diverse, involving everything from road crash rescues in remote areas to vertical rescue, storm damage and flood boat response.

"We do a significant amount of work with bushfires; while our members aren't on the front line fighting the fires they're doing a lot of work behind the scenes."

He said the community might not be aware of the sheer amount of work SES does and SES Week was a good opportunity to highlight that.

"And also being October, we're into the wet season and it's a good reminder for people to start preparing their properties."

Mr White said while Kirby Shannon had only been a member for a short time, she'd really stepped up and done a lot of good work in Rockhampton and the wider community.

Kirby Shannon has been named Central Region's Member of the Year as part of State Emergency Service Week.

Here comes a bridal expo

By Jackie Dobson

With Covid-19 restrictions easing, Rockhampton brides can now get on with planning their weddings.

The CQ Wedding Expo is being held at the Rockhampton Showgrounds from 8.30am - 1.30pm on Sunday, 1 November.

Over 40 local vendors will be on-hand to showcase their products and services at The Robert Schwarden Pavilion.

Event organiser Brooke Harris said everything you need to plan your special day will be there.

"Stages will be placed around the expo and models will present on stage for 15 minutes every hour," Ms Harris said.

"They will be dressed by Mason Bridal and hair and makeup will be done by My Place Hair and Beauty, they will look absolutely stunning.

"Live music will be on stage by the Hello Brothers and A2Z Live Entertainment."

Over 500 people are expected to turn up to the Covid-safe event and wedding expo booklets will also be available for brides.

Entry is $5 and children 14 and under are free.

$6.5m promise in doubt

By Liam Emerton

A $6.5 million promise seems to have been taken away from a prestigious Rockhampton Sporting Club recently.

On Wednesday, in a live interview with One Nation Candidate for Rockhampton Torin O'Brien and Member for Rockhampton Barry O'Rourke, Mr O'Brien brought up the $6.5 million that had been allegedly taken away from the Capras however there was no direct response from Mr O'Rourke around the issue.

The allegation follows a $25 million pledge for stage one of upgrades to Browne Park if Labor is re-elected.

"I've met with a local sporting group who were given a verbal commitment from the Member for Rockhampton to fund and a further $6.5 million towards a multi-sports facility at Rugby Park," Mr O'Brien said.

"Senior figures within the Rockhampton sporting community are outraged by Labor's decision to strip this promised money away from their sporting codes.

"From all accounts, this was a last-minute decision made to satisfy the old guard of the Labor Party here in Central Queensland, instead of doing what is right for the whole community.

"Locals are starting to seriously question Labor's plan to spend an estimated $100 million on this white elephant, better known as Browne Park."

Mr O'Rourke responded to this by reinstating his election promise of the upgrade without touching on the Capras Rugby League Club subject.

"As far as Browne Park is concerned it was my election commitment to provide Browne Park $25 million dollars which I've done, if I'm re-elected," Mr O'Rourke said.

"I'm still pushing for Browne Park, it's been the home of rugby league for over 100 years.

"It is as easy as that, it was my commitment and I'm delivering on that."

Mr O'Brien stated: "If we want to continue producing a cross-section of inspirational sportspeople from Rockhampton, we need to spend government money across a variety of codes, especially those played at Jardine Park and Rugby Park."

"Barry owes the sports community a 'please explain' as to why he's backflipped on the funding commitment to the local AFL and Rugby Park organisations.

"Without a Queensland budget, there's no guarantee Labor have even put money aside for Browne Park."

"These promises and commitments are proving very false from a desperate Labor Government who's own internal polling is showing a wipeout for the premier and her party in seats north of Gympie."

Mr O'Brien has committed to reinstating the promised funding to the AFL and multi-sports facility at Rugby Park if elected on 31 October.

The Capras Rugby League Club declined to comment on the issue.

Rockhampton One Nation candidate Torin O'Brien says a $6.5 million promise has been allegedly taken away from the Capras.

Shining a light on struggles in Southern Cameroons

By Matthew Pearce

Lilian, from the Southern Cameroons, says most people aren't aware of the ongoing struggle in her homeland.

Once a British Territory, the Southern Cameroons have been part of Africa's Republic of Cameroon since 1961, where it makes up the Northwest Region and Southwest Region.

The region is Anglophile (English-speaking) as opposed to the Francophile (French-speaking) majority of the country.

Lilian, who didn't want to use her full name, said the Southern Cameroons Association Australia aimed to bring to light the struggle of English speaking Southern Cameroons who she said were facing an ongoing genocide.

The association's ultimate aim is the unconditional restoration of the statehood of the Southern Cameroons region, also called Ambazonia.

"There is an ongoing genocide in my country that has been going on for four years now," she said.

"In 2016, lawyers, teachers and students went into the streets to protest and send a message to the government about their treatment," she said.

"The government sent in the military and they started shooting from the air; 60 young people, university students, were killed and since then the conflict has escalated.

"I've lost eight people in my family through this crisis, the youngest was 22 years old, a young man who was supposed to come to Australia but was buried alive."

Lilian said there was no school in the Southern Cameroons, and children as young as two months old had been killed by the military.

"The French language was enforced on Anglophone students, but not English on Francophones," she said.

"Schools have been burnt, 5000 houses have been erased, 700 villages have been erased and people are living on the streets.

"People have been shot, beheaded, burnt alive. The government takes the money they have been given to fight the coronavirus and spends it on weapons."

Lilian said the Southern Cameroons Association Australia wanted to create awareness, and had approached politicians and church-

The construction of a high school at Gracemere is a no-brainer. It needs to be built!

I also want to prioritise our youth who have lost interest in everyday schooling and can't see a future for themselves.

Following the Labor Government's closure of the agricultural colleges at Longreach and Emerald, we need to ensure there are higher educational opportunities that focus on the agricultural sector.

By working with council and the federal government to create an environment for private enterprise to flourish, we can also create jobs in agriculture, mining, and manufacturing.

Our young people can then choose their future.

Age no barrier for cycling seniors

By Matthew Pearce

Seeing trishaws ferrying seniors around Copenhagen inspired Mary O'Donnell to bring the service to Yeppoon.

A worldwide organisation, Cycling Without Age, is now in 50 countries and allows seniors to connect with volunteer riders and others while they enjoy a free trishaw ride.

The Cycling Without Age Yeppoon Chapter was launched on 11 October.

"Through this unique program volunteers give of their time to connect meaningfully with seniors in the community and listen to their unique, and often untold, life stories," Ms O'Donnell said.

"It also provides the opportunity to reach out to others, help counteract loneliness and isolation and make new friendships.

"These connections can bring great joy to the volunteers as well as to the passengers, taking time to slow down, enjoy intergenerational company, and experience the wind in their hair as they share in the beauty of the outdoors."

Ms O'Donnell said the response from the wider community had been amazing.

"The Iwasaki Foundation provided a generous grant of $35,000 to purchase two specially designed battery-powered trishaws.

"Vinnies assisted with the application and have been invaluable in bringing this project to fruition. A partnership with the PCYC has also been forged, and the Livingstone Shire Council has provided ongoing support."

Volunteers have been trained, safe routes along the foreshore have been trialled and procedures for Covid compliant rides are now in place.

Tax deductible donations can be made by visiting cyclingwithoutage.org.au and clicking the 'Yeppoon' chapter option, directly through the Bendigo Bank, or by visiting the Facebook page Cycling Without Age Yeppoon.

Ted notches up century

By Matthew Pearce

Not many people are still driving in their mid nineties, but Rockhampton's Ted Lawlor, who turned 100 on 10 October, is far from your average person.

One of six children, Edward "Ted" Lawlor was born in Brisbane and served in the Second World War as part of the 5th Light Horse Regiment and later as a gunner in Papua New Guinea.

Working for the Postmaster-General's department, he was transferred to Bowen where he met his future wife Irene "Bon" Bidgood.

After living out west, Ted and Bon settled in Rockhampton, where they raised three daughters, Carmel, Terese and Det, and would live there for the rest of their lives.

The Lawlors were a big part of the Catholic Church's Cathedral Parish where Ted was involved with the establishment of the St Joseph's Credit Union (now The Capricornian), where he was on the board and did the books.

Ted lived in his own home until two years ago when he moved to Leinster Place Residential Aged Care Facility in North Rockhampton.

"Before that, he was doing everything, mowing, home-maintenance and he was still driving at age 96," his daughter Therese said.

"Mum and dad painted their own home inside and out, they used to get up really early, at five o'clock, and started painting in case we arrived so they wouldn't get in trouble with us," Det said.

"Dad has a great sense of humour still."

Bon passed away 12 months ago and she and Ted had been married for 70 years. They have nine grandchildren and 13 great-grandchildren.

Ted had two parties for his 100th birthday, one at Leinster Place on Friday, 9 October and a family event the following day at Col Brown Park on the riverbank, where he received his card from The Queen.

Honouring Stewie Harald

Yeppoon's Stewie Harald Park was a hive of activity on Saturday, 10 October when 100 people gathered to commemorate the service and sacrifice of Noel Stewie Harald.

Stewie died of his wounds following an ambush at Dat Do, South Vietnam, in 1967.

Many members of Harald's extended family travelled long distances to attend the service at the park, on the corner of Melbourne and Tabone Sts, and the younger family members planted a tree in remembrance.

Organiser Sheryl O'Connor said it was wonderful to see the family members together again and they really enjoyed the day.

Livingstone Shire Mayor Andy Ireland gave an address.

"This is a significant occasion for Livingstone's history and this memorial takes pride of place in this park, fittingly named after Private Harald, to remember the legacy he left and the fight he gave not only for his family, friends and local community, but for the freedom of our nation," he said.

Many wreaths and poppies were laid at the cairn.

Stewie's sister Wendy Harald and her grandson Jerome Wilson, who is wearing Stewie's medals. Veteran Ian Cavanough pinned his ICB (Combat Infantry Badge) onto Jerome's shirt later in the day to complete Stewie's medals.

Gold buyers are in town

Published author and valuer Richard Macdonald and his team will be bringing over $1 million of exquisite antique and estate jewellery and collectables to tempt buyers and inform sellers at the Yeppoon Central Shopping Centre.

Richard, the director of The Unique Jewellery Co, Best Price Gold Buyers and acclaimed writer of Selling Collectables Made Easy, and his team will be located beside Mister Minit from 26-31 October. He has kindly offered to extend his broad knowledge by offering free market appraisals of jewellery, all things gold and silver, watches, all coins, banknotes, stamps, medals and military items.

He encourages all residents of Central Queensland to make the trip to Yeppoon as you certainly will not be disappointed with the result and go home with cash in hand.

However, Richard's main reason for coming to the Capricorn Coast is to replenish his stock. The very items he is happy to give you a market appraisal on are the very same he is happy and hoping to buy from you.

As the largest buyer and seller of estate gold and silver jewellery in Australia, he needs to buy to replace gold jewellery, at the same rate it is sold.

He reports that due to a very busy Christmas selling season at antique fairs and other shopping centres, his reserve stocks are almost wiped out and he is in desperate need of all gold jewellery, but especially gold chains both heavy and light, both in good resalable conditional and/or broken.

Recycling is close to Richard's heart and all items sold to him broken or not are lovingly restored at his jewellery repair shop and then reappear 'born anew', looking for a new loving owner.

To this end, his shop has a seemingly insatiable appetite for broken gold in all colours, yellow, rose and white.

Richard says there is not a single piece of gold we refuse to buy, including old gold nuggets, old wedding and dress rings, single earrings broken chains, and yes, yucky but true, old gold teeth and fillings.

Richard Macdonald will be bringing more than $1 million of exquisite antique and estate jewellery and collectables to tempt buyers and inform sellers at the Yeppoon Central Shopping Centre

"And we are paying top dollar to get it," he says.

Don't forget to bring your coin, banknote and stamp collections to Richard and his team.

They buy all of these in any condition and have buyers waiting for your collections and even for your small tins of coins.

Richard tells me a very old lady who brought in a medium size tin of coins, found after her husband died. Amongst the mix of pennies, pre-decimal silver and common coins, Richard found a gold half sovereign. She literally cried when we told her the tin's value was $260 including the gold. She had no idea it was even there. A wonderful moment to be able to help this lovely lady find some undiscovered wealth.

Richard Macdonald and Best Price Gold Buyers will be located beside Mister Minit, Yeppoon Central Shopping Centre, 26-31 October 26 in a pop-up shop.

Resign before campaign

The Rocky Mayor has every right to wrap herself in bubble wrap to protest the Labor Government law that says if she runs for a state seat the runner up gets to don the mayoral robes.

After all she's not the first elected person to perform a stunt like that. Personally I disagree with this law, I prefer the one we brought in that meant a wanna be polly could not ride two horses in the one race.

Neil Fisher and Mary Carroll both had the guts to forgo their council careers and seek higher office. Neither were successful but both have returned to successful careers. Now before someone yells hypocrite at me for being a Rocky city Alderman when elected as MP for Rocky North in 1989 I plead guilty. My only defence is that these were the days of part time local government. My annual ratepayer funded pay packet was less than five grand. In those days it was a meeting allowance. These days they are full time with superannuation and I have no problem with that.

But last state election our Mayor decided that the ALP branch members were wrong and she was right. She ran as an independent and was duly expelled from the ALP. With eight out of 10 locals voting against her she clearly did not heed the message. Voters want a mayor to run the term not do as this mayor did last time, pretend not to be the mayor for a couple of weeks, take the ratepayer dollar and then step back into the mayor's office the Sunday after being rejected by the electorate.

So I'm suggesting that whether it's blue or red that gets the gong at the end of this month the Local Government Act should be amended to ensure that a councillor or mayor must resign if they seek higher office.

While I am at it, it should be an offence for councils to use ratepayer funds to campaign against a candidate. The mayor's decision to put ratepayers money into a campaign that would destroy Rockhampton State High School by supporting a new high school at Gracemere is disgraceful at every level.

The only way a high school will ever be built there is if some politician overrules the government planners who say the numbers do not add up.

The pathway to jail for a minister who does that is well laid out. I have relatives who sit on buses in Brisbane for twice the time to get to high school as kids from Gracemere do to get to Rocky High but, as the patron of Rocky High and a volunteer there, I will fight to my last curse to stop any erosion of the teacher numbers and curriculum options there.

You can't ignore the reality of trying to set up a state high school in a place where about 30 per cent of parents send their kids to private high schools. I have no issue there, they have every right to do so.

My issue is with the mayor Ms Strelow and any other councillor who voted to spend ratepayer dollars on campaigning against the Labor state government. Sadly, under our electoral laws, there is no remedy for the ratepayer to redeem the funds that are being splurged on these sort of antics.

While I am on my high horse, I reckon every candidate should be forced to declare whether they owe money to the taxpayer and others regardless of if they are discharged of the debt or not. I'm confident that 99 per cent would comply, but I know at least one local candidate wouldn't. Thankfully the ALP has a process to weed out undesirables like this out of the process, and I think the LNP does too. How can someone who fails to pay their tax expect the taxpayer to employ them? It's unconscionable as well as unfair.

State of our roads show need to go back to basics

This past week I drove 2200 kilometres through Central Queensland. I visited five coal mines, farms and a few pubs for a drink and a meal.

Two things strike you when you drive through Central Queensland. First, so much wealth is generated in our region. Second, the state of our roads do not match the level of prosperity that we generate.

Central Queensland produces $40 billion of wealth for Australia every year, from a population base of just over 400,000. That's an income per person of more than $100,000, double that of Tasmania. Our higher productivity is largely thanks to the coal, cattle, cane and cotton that we produce in the region.

Yet the roads that connect our wealth-producing mines and farms are sub-standard. I spoke to people at the Moranbah Workers Club last week about some sections of the Peak Downs Highway where major accidents have recently occurred. The Fitzroy Development Road makes you go up and down more than a trampoline and the May Downs Road is a corrugated, unsafe goat track. A local Facebook group - May Downs Rd, Enough is Enough - has reported six major accidents over the past year on this road.

Some of these roads do need major investments.

Over the past few years, the federal government has provided 80 per cent of the funds for major upgrades to state roads. Previously the federal government only contributed 50 per cent of the funds. There has been a new version of the 'Beef Roads' program that is seeing the sealing of the Clermont to Alpha Road, Springsure to Tambo and parts of May Downs Road. The Walkerston Bypass upgrade is about to begin as well. All together the federal government is spending over $500 million upgrading rural roads in Central Queensland and another $800 million towards the construction of the Rockhampton Ring Road.

Senator Matt Canavan says governments should focus again on basic things like maintaining safe and productive roads.

The state LNP has also announced further upgrades to the Peak Downs Highway if it gets in and plans to upgrade the Bruce Highway to four lanes.

Perhaps the most important change, however, could be to spend more on road maintenance. The roads in Central Queensland get a hammering.

Some loads are not just wide they are heavy and make short work of roads already built on rich black soils made for growing crops not building roads on. But that shouldn't be an excuse. Those wide loads make money for our state and more of the revenue from these investments should come back into keep the roads up to scratch.

In an answer to a question on notice in the parliament last year, the Queensland government admitted that there is a $5.4 billion 'maintenance backlog' in road upgrades, including a $940 million backlog in Central Queensland.

This is not surprising when the Brisbane-based government spends money on bonuses for public servants but fails to get the basics right.

The economic fallout from coronavirus should encourage us to get back to basics. To back our local wealth-producing industries that have held up the country at this difficult time. Governments should focus again on the basic things that are in their control like maintaining safe and productive roads so that we can create even more wealth from our region.

Q&A

RUSSELL EADIE is the president of the Rockhampton Lapidary Club, one of the most unique clubs in the Central Queensland district.

What is the best advice you've ever received?
Quality means doing it right when no one is looking - Henry Ford.

What is something you do in your spare time?
Spare time is an elusive creature. I do lapidary and enjoy fossicking when I can.

What is something most people don't know about you?
If I tell you then the greater readership will know, I enjoy learning and improving my knowledge. Most people don't know that. And I'm a good cook.

What do you do for work and what do you enjoy about it?
I work in aged care. What I enjoy about it is the people I work with, the people I work for (the residents), and the challenge of making every-day a good day for them.

What is your favourite spot in the Central Queensland region?
The Gemfields, but I want to explore more of the region.

What would be your last meal if you could choose?
A good steak and vegetables and my favourite single malt scotch.

What is something you think CQ needs?
A good continental delicatessen and small goods shop. I miss Melbourne's multicultural cuisine.

What guests (dead or alive) would you invite to a dinner party?
Phil Irving. Gough and Margaret Whitlam. Queen Elizabeth. My son and his girlfriend. My great father.

OPINION

Letters: editorial@cqtoday.com.au
Text: 0487 024 124

Leyland Barnett says the Covid-19 crisis has revealed the quality of our leaders like Annastacia Palaszczuk.

Harbour’s problem is parking

I see Brittany Lauga and the ALP have promised $2 million for pontoon and ramp infrastructure at Rosslyn Bay Harbour.

The problem is not the ramps and pontoons. The problem is the parking of cars and trailers, people have to park illegally because the car park is full. There is no room to build new car parks, so the only way forward is another ramp and pontoon away from Rosslyn Bay. None of the council or state or federal representatives are pushing for this.

It will take five or six years to build it, when they decide where to build it but they are not even talking about it yet. But I have been told if you get there by 3am you can sometimes get a legal park. So happy boating.

Col Power
Farnborough

Don’t count on political promises

I consider myself one of the lucky ones when it comes to elections. I don’t belong to a political party, a church organisation, a social group of any kind or a union. Therefore, I don’t have to support or be influenced by anyone in particular.

I hear all the promises like fixing the Bruce Highway and think back to Tony Abbott promising to get it fixed by spending 11 billion dollars when elected - didn’t happen. Various state governments have promised the same sort of thing - hasn’t happened.

Now we have another promise of $33 billion of expenditure.

So, I (like many others) ignore this sort of promise as a pie in the sky fairytale. Where is the money coming from in this era of economic uncertainty?

The ones that do alarm me are the promises that are made with no reference to cost. For example, one of the major parties has promised to give drivers a 10-year license for a five-year license cost if they have a good driving history. This means those eligible will affectively get a gift of $183.95 which is the cost of a five-year license. There are 2,800,000 people in Queensland who are eligible (according to a southern newspaper), so this means an overall cost of $515,060,000. So, who or what misses out after we giveaway over half a billion dollars? I wonder what could be accomplished with this expenditure on our roads.

We have also heard various politicians and others bleating about our border closures saying it’s affecting our tourism industry, etc. When I drive to Rockhampton from my home address, I am held up every day in both directions by caravans and motorhomes, most of which have southern number plates.

Also, we are told that Yeppoon at least has no available accommodation anywhere.

Obviously like any normal person I do not want to see people lose jobs or their businesses, but I have serious doubts about the ‘devastating’ effect of the border issue.

In the meantime, we are enjoying (and hopefully will continue to do so) minimal affects of Covid-19.

My point here is that it would be nice if for once we could listen to politicians and aspiring politicians and accept that they might, just might be telling the truth.

The usual thing is that if there is a change of government there will a large blackhole found in our finances and most of the unattainable promises will be dropped like hot bull dung.

Alan Nicholson
Mount Chalmers

What is best for society?

There comes a time when we need to start thinking what is best for society instead of ‘what’s in it for me?’

The current pandemic has caused most of us to consider what we can do together and for the common good, rather than the ‘I’m all right Jack’ attitude which had been progressively creeping in.

So it is with politics.

The LNP generally focuses on narrow sectional interests, mainly around wealth, and has to be dragged kicking and screaming into giving a hand up to the less well-off in society. One Nation concentrates to a large extent, on divisive social issues including race and immigration, but will never have enough seats to take positive action anyway.

The Labor Party has demonstrated time and time again, that they want to uplift the less fortunate, provide greater opportunity for all, and strive for a fair go. I suggest that our current situation demands the Labor approach rather than ‘what’s in it for me’ or ‘I’m all right Jack’.

A Bambrick
North Rockhampton

Disgraceful government

The current Covid crisis has certainly revealed the quality of our leaders in our states today. Double standards when it comes down to border closures. The rich being allowed in while genuine battlers are required to stay locked down in a motel rooms.

The Queensland Health officer states that we need to have a 1.5m clearance in public places as well as using hand sanitiser and sterilising our points of contact.

Maybe the fact that Queenslanders have listened to health advice and that is why we don’t have an outbreak of Covid and in fact, lower flu cases? It doesn’t matter if you are rich or poor, the virus doesn’t discriminate and someone recovering from a brain tumour is least likely to spread a virus around as they would be confined to a room with their problem. Yet someone who is a millionaire who has the ability to travel and spread the virus far and wide is not confined?

Border protection is in what I believe a total political campaign for the state ALP to desperately try and regain power for the next four-year term.

They will not produce a budget that outlines the taxes that they will need to pay for their promises, before the election. So are death duties off the agenda and other taxes?

Taxes that stop an economy from developing and stop businesses creating jobs will lead to a four year disaster if Queenslanders don’t back the party that will Get Queensland Working Again.

We are all Australians in this crisis and we all need to stand by each other. Why are police armed to the hilt at borders while the army are not? All Australians fought wars with all of our states and territories involved and all Australians matter.

The premiers that intend to incur double standards for the sake of their re-election need to be exposed for their cold heartless consideration for our general public.

Make no mistake when you strike off the ballot paper that you strike off this disgraceful ALP Queensland government.

Leyland Barnett
Nth Rockhampton

Can’t trust the LNP on rego handout

The LNP can’t be trusted on their cost of living promises. Last time the LNP promised to freeze car registration, it went up.

When they promised $120 off power bills, they then increased by $440 on average.

Labor has already delivered $250 off the cost of living relief to households on power bills this year with another $50 on the way next year.

The LNP’s policy means a pensioner with no car gets nothing, but everyone gets $300 under Labor for their electricity bill.

The LNP hasn’t identified how they will pay for their promises.

This now takes their unfunded commitments to more than $25 billion.

Deb Frecklington has confirmed the LNP wants to recklessly get surplus in four years.

When the economy is in a recession, caused by the global coronavirus pandemic, the only way for her and the LNP to get there is to cut.

Cuts would only send Queensland backwards and damage Queensland’s economy.

Queenslanders should be reminded that we are still one of the cheapest states in Australia to register a vehicle.

If we were still using the LNP’s fees and charges policy, rego fees would be rising 3.5 per cent on every year.

Covid and SMSF rentals

The Federal government announced a six-month moratorium on evictions of commercial and residential tenants during the Covid-19 health pandemic.

This moratorium, and its accompanying code of conduct leasing principles, will inevitably affect SMSFs, which are reasonably heavily invested in real property, according to statistics.

LEASING PRINCIPLES

A moratorium on evictions means that SMSF (self-managed super fund) landlords face the real prospect of tenants falling behind on their rent. However, this does not mean that the tenant is not required to pay rent during the moratorium period.

Rather, broadly speaking, parties are encouraged and indeed required to negotiate a rental reduction, deferrals, or rent-free periods if the tenant needs. In terms of commercial rents, a mandatory code has been developed and applies if a tenant or landlord is eligible for JobKeeper payments and has a turnover of less than $50 million. The code includes a common set of principles that must be adhered to, including:

- Landlords must not terminate leases for non-payment of rent during the Covid-19 pandemic (or reasonable recovery period)
- Tenants must stay committed to their lease terms (subject to amendments)
- Landlords must offer reductions in rent (as waivers or deferrals) based on the tenant's reduction in trade during COVID-19
- Benefits that owners receive for their properties (eg reduced charges, land tax, deferred loan payments from banks) should be passed on to the tenant proportionately

However, granting rental relief - where not carefully justified and documented - can present considerable compliance risks for SMSF landlords. This includes fines of up to $12,600 per trustee and/or in serious instances the SMSF being deemed non-complying, in which case the value of its assets as at the commencement of the income year could be taxed at 45 per cent.

NON ARM'S LENGTH TENANTS

Where the property is held by the SMSF and the tenant is a "related party" of the SMSF trustee, unless care is taken, evidence gathered, and the arrangement is properly documented, there is a real risk that, in granting rental relief, breaches of the following provisions of the SIS Act may result.

- The sole purpose test. In granting rental relief, the SMSF trustee may not be deemed to be acting with the sole purpose of maximising the retirement benefits of members of the fund, but rather acting to assist the related party with their rental expenses.

A moratorium on evictions means that SMSF (self-managed super fund) landlords face the real prospect of tenants falling behind on their rent.

- The arm's length test. In granting rental relief to a related party, it may be considered that the fund is not maintaining all investments and transactions at arm's length, in the same way as they would deal with an unrelated party.
- In-house asset test. In providing rent relief, is the SMSF providing a loan to the related party tenant? In the unlikely event that this loan exceeds 5% of the value of the fund's assets, the fund can be deemed to be non-complying.
- Prohibition against lending or providing financial assistance to a member or relative. In granting relief to the tenant member or relative, could it still be said that the arrangement is still on commercial or arm's length terms so as to avoid being deemed "financial assistance"?

It is, however, important to note that the ATO updated its auditor/actuary contravention report (ACR) instructions for the 2019-20 income year to state SMSF auditors will not be required to report in the ACR breaches of the sole purpose test and in-house provisions that may occur as a result of Covid-19 rent relief measures.

ARM'S LENGTH TENANTS

Although the risk is less acute, with potentially only the sole purpose test in play, the same careful evidence gathering and documentation is recommended where rental relief is granted to a party who is not related to the SMSF trustee. Unless it can be demonstrated that the relief granted was actually still in the broader interests of the SMSF, then a breach of the rules is a possibility.

JUSTIFICATION

To establish a strong case for granting rental relief, SMSF trustees should obtain sufficient evidence including the following where applicable:

- The financial circumstance of the tenant. In terms of evidencing this, it may take the form of:
  - Their eligibility for JobKeeper (which itself requires evidence of a downturn in turnover)
  - Year-to-date financial statements
  - Cashflow forecasts
- A report from the tenant's registered tax agent that the tenant is experiencing Covid-19-related financial difficulties that may impact their ability to pay the agreed rate of rent
- Government restrictions that may impact the tenant long-term, such as those imposed on large restaurants where, even when they are permitted to open, social distancing requirements in the venue may still nonetheless impact capacity and profitability
- Any comparable rental relief that is being offered by arm's length landlords to their tenants
- The difficulty in leasing out the property to a new tenant, should the current tenant default on the lease. The location of the property, or the type of property may mean that retaining the current tenant - even with rental relief - is in the long-term best interests of the SMSF, particularly where the current tenant has an otherwise good history in terms of paying on time and looking after the property

- To the above point, if the property was untenanted, it may be more difficult to obtain insurance cover. Additionally, untenanted properties are arguably more vulnerable to break-ins and natural deterioration/run-down.

It is important that any rental relief that is granted is proportionate to the above, and that the new arrangement is properly documented by amending the lease agreement between the parties, including the reasons for any reductions.

In summary, where the related-party lender provides any relief to the SMSF that is not comparable to an arm's-length arrangement (that it may offer unrelated parties in these fraught economic times), then the ATO may then apply the non-arm's length rules to tax any net income or future capital gain from the property, for the entire future period of ownership, at the top individual marginal tax rate.

Whether these provisions are applied may ultimately depend on whether the SMSF can justify with documented evidence that the decision to alter repayment terms is done on a commercial basis as if the parties were unrelated.

ADFAS back in action

By Jenny Lightfoot

After almost seven months of isolation due to the Covid-19 ban on live lectures, Australian Decorative and Fine Arts Society (ADFAS) Rockhampton Inc members look forward to getting together at Frenchville Sports Club on Saturday, November 7, for a screened lecture.

Instead of watching digital lectures at home, they will be able to catch-up with friends in a Covid- safe environment and enjoy Patricia Law's lecture, 'The Eastern Influence on European Jewellery' on a big screen.

Every woman values jewellery, so who better to describe jewels and their origins than Fellow of the Gemmological Society and a Fellow of the Institute of Registered Valuers, Patricia Law.

Her screened lecture looks at the gemstones traded and exported to Europe, such as pearls from the Indies in Roman times, and the gems in the Crown Jewels.

"There were rubies from Burma, sapphires from Kashmir and Ceylon and Imperial Jade from China," Patricia said.

"With these gemstones came influences on styles and the way jewellery was worn.

"Some pieces were directly copied and at other times simple motifs were added to existing styles," she said.

In this Art Society lecture, Patricia aims to show the glamour of the East and how the West embraced and absorbed its myriad influences.

She has spent 25 years working for International Auction Houses preparing jewellery sales for London, Geneva and New York, and established her own valuation business in 2015.

ADFAS Rockhampton members, Anita Mair, Beryl Neilsen and Jan Davison.

Patricia also enjoys a role in teaching gemology and jewellery history to newly qualified insurance brokers, as well as lecturing to private associations and charitable groups.

All ADFAS Rockhampton Inc members are invited to attend this free 10.30am screening at Frenchville Sports Club on November 7.

There will be a raffle and light refreshments served. However due to COVID-19 restrictions bookings are essential.

Please email ADFAS secretary Janet Gentle on janet.gentle@gmail.com or phone her on 0428 267 655 by Wednesday, November 4, to book.

Social media in break-ups

By Paula Phelan,
Phelan Family Law

The break-up of a relationship is usually a time of high tension, stress and often anger.

In days gone by you could have a good vent to your friends at the local pub or club about the behaviour of your partner, and that would be the end of it.

It would usually stay at the pub or club. To-day however, social media with the phenomenon of Facebook, Instagram and Twitter has ensured that any venting using any of these vehicles will definitely not “stay at the pub”.

Even though you may be angry, upset and humiliated, you should avoid using social media to express your feelings at all costs. You are not just talking to your friends, you are talking to the world.

There are several reasons why you must abstain.

You should be aware that any comments you make, particularly those fuelled by emotion, anger and sometimes alcohol may be used as evidence against you in future Family Court proceedings.

This could have a detrimental affect against you, particularly with parenting matters involving your children.

Another negative influence of using social media is how an emotional or angry message may affect your children, immediate family and close friends. It is almost guaranteed that these people and many more will end up reading it.

Anyone who is in the middle of family law proceedings with their ex should definitely be very cautious of what they post.

The Family Law Act prohibits the publication of any material that identifies a party or a witness in proceedings before the Family Court.

Any such publication amounts to a serious offence under the act.

It also includes any publication of the names of children who are the subject of parenting proceedings.

Prior to the advent of Facebook, the prohibition on publication mostly applied to newspapers and journalists.

With the rapid growth of social media in recent times, your Facebook updates may well amount to an offence if they publicly identify people involved in a Family Law Court case.

Social media usage can create even wider issues. A decision of a Magistrates Court in North Queensland found that a derogatory comment, posted by a man about his ex-wife on Facebook, amounted to defamation.

The post, which referred to the wife as “thieving, lying, money crazed” among other expletives, was found to be a defamation of the wife’s character.

Even though the post was removed by the husband within 24 hours, the post was seen by mutual friends, and the husband was ordered to pay the wife the sum of $10,000 in compensation for the defamation of her character.

So, it is important to think twice before posting something on social media, regardless how hurt, emotional or angry you are feeling at the time.

Perhaps on social media, as well as in life, we should live by the saying “if you don’t have anything nice to say, don’t say anything at all”.

A Christmas bird book

As part of its fund raising for Cancer Research, Rockhampton North Rotary Club has produced a new beautiful bird picture book in time for Christmas this year.

The magnificent set of photos from the calendars of three previous years, have been donated by award winning nature photographer Keith Ireland.

It is to be a limited edition with only 200 books being printed.

Consequently this book could become a collector's item as each book will be individually signed by Keith and numbered.

The cost per book will be only $20. If books are to be forwarded to a purchaser, then that cost will be added on to the price.

In Rockhampton, books can be purchased at City Printing Works East Street and Green Bros Alma Street.

Other options can be by ringing 0458 272 500 or 0417 362 436, or by emailing kgireland@bigpond.com

Photographer Keith Ireland signs copies of the new limited edition bird book raising funds for cancer research assisted by fellow Calendar team members Eric Anderson, President Col Pyne and Frank Pacey.

Brooke McMullen pays tribute to Dolly Parton.

Inspiring tribute to Dolly

After 60 years, Dolly Parton continues to be America's sweetheart of country music.

The Songs of Dolly Parton is a new and uplifting tribute show that celebrates the decades-long success of the most honoured female country performer of all time.

From rags to riches, Dolly Parton's life story has remained humble and honest in her performance.

Starring Brooke McMullen, who at just 23 is a superstar in the making. After huge success as June Carter in the hit show Leaving Jackson, Brooke is thrilled to now pay tribute to one of the biggest names in music.

The Songs of Dolly Parton will feature all your favourites, from 9 to 5, Jolene, Rocking Years, Islands in the Stream, Blue Smoke, Apple Jack, I Will Always Love You and many more.

This is a performance not to be missed by all fans of country music.

The show will be held at the Pilbeam Theatre on Saturday, 14 November at 7.30pm. Prices are Adult $57, Concession $49, Disability Support $45, Student/Child $29, Friend of Theatre $49

Appeal to adopt a family

By Matthew Pearce

There's just two months until Christmas, which means it's time for the Adopt-A-Family for Christmas Appeal.

Local charities are supporting the event and everyone from individuals and families to businesses, clubs, schools and workplaces are being asked to get involved.

St Vincent de Paul volunteer Barb Cavanagh has been involved with the appeal for about six years and said she'd already had calls about when this year's appeal would start.

"When it first started it was just to provide a meal for Christmas but people are quite generous," she said.

"We have a standard list that we say must be in the hamper, which includes things like a tin of ham, a Christmas cake, Christmas pudding, long life custard, cereal and long life milk, soft drink, cordial as well as things like pastas, but we've also received things like toothbrushes and toothpaste as well as Christmas bonbons."

Barb said families of all shapes and sizes would be up for "adoption".

"We often find that a family might want to adopt a family that's akin to their family layout and you see places like daycare centres adopt big families," she said.

"We had a lot of single women last year which was very sad because you think, they're probably going to have Christmas by themselves."

Barb reminded people spending Christmas alone that St Joseph's Cathedral had a Christmas lunch for those in need.

She said when Vinnies had families that weren't adopted, they would make up the slack, either through donations or out of their own pocket.

"We would like to see as many families adopted as possible."

To select the family you would like to adopt, look out for the family lists in upcoming issues of CQ Today.

CQUni welcomes LNP funding promise

CQUniversity has warmly welcomed a $49.8 million commitment from the Queensland LNP to build the Central Queensland TAFE Centre of Excellence in Rockhampton.

The funding commitment, announced by LNP leader Deb Frecklington MP, would cover the full cost of the project if the LNP is elected at this month's state ballot.

It means the project now has the support of both major parties and most minor parties.

CQUniversity Vice-Chancellor and President Professor Nick Klomp welcomed Ms Frecklington's commitment, describing it as a "game changer" for skills-based training in the Rockhampton region.

"As the public provider of TAFE in Central Queensland, CQUniversity takes very seriously its obligation to provide world-class facilities and training to the region's apprentices, trainees and VET students," Professor Klomp said.

"Today's commitment from the LNP provides reassurance to the region, our students, and their employers, that we now have a commitment from both major parties to build this much-needed facility.

"I thank Deb Frecklington and the LNP for recognising CQUniversity's vision for the future of TAFE in Central Queensland, and for rising to the occasion via this funding commitment."

The LNP commitment follows a Labor pledge to fund the $8.4m first stage of the TAFE Centre of Excellence, and commitments from minor parties should they hold the balance of power.

Professor Klomp said the Central Queensland TAFE Centre of Excellence would employ 350 people during the construction phase, 300 people long-term, and have capacity to train an additional 2,500 apprentices and VET students a year by 2030.

"Given the current economic climate, the TAFE Centre of Excellence represents an ideal investment by government; it will create new jobs immediately, and then will keep turning out highly skilled, highly qualified Central Queenslanders for many years after," Professor Klomp said.

Once complete, the 26,000sqm TAFE Centre of Excellence will replace the existing Deb Frecklington with Professor Nick Klomp at the CQUniversity Rockhampton North Campus.

Canning Street TAFE. The new facility will be co-located on CQUniversity's Rockhampton North campus, with the full construction project expected to be completed within three years.

News store turns four

The Lucky Charm Parkhurst Newsagency will celebrate its fourth birthday in December.

Newsagency owner Jarrod Black said he has been in the industry for about 14 years and in that time he has seen some big changes.

"I've noticed that we're moving away from the reliance on print media, I think magazines and newspapers have had their day," Mr Black said.

"You can pick up a newspaper or a magazine practically anywhere, from the newsa-gency to the grocery store to the service station.

"My business has transitioned to more of a card and gift offering. We stock a lot of products that are unique to us and not available anywhere else.

"I employ five staff members at the Parkhurst store, one is full time and four are casual, we have a great team and we enjoy what we do.

"I look forward to seeing what the future holds."

Breeze Hair and Beauty gives clients 'wow' factor

Breeze Hair and Beauty at the Parkhurst Town Centre have been operating for almost four years.

Salon owner Breanna Smith says they have five girls in the salon who adore working with hair and makeup for all occasions, particularly weddings.

Breanna said they use the best brands including Keune, Lust Makeup and Cloudnine to get you to looking your absolute best.

The salon also offers a wide range of beauty services such as waxing and tinting so it is a one stop shop for all your pampering needs.

"We love to bring out a person's natural beauty and help give them that 'wow' factor for their special occasion," Breanna said.

The best B-grade photos

By Rex Boggs

If someone asks, “what can I do to improve my photography?”, my answer is, “enter your photos into competitions, and learn from the feedback”.

It can be a bit scary at first, especially if a photo that had great comments on Facebook doesn't score that well in a competition.

But if your purpose for entering is not to win but to learn, your photography will continue to improve. And eventually that magic day will arrive when one of your photos wins a competition!

In the monthly competitions in the Rocky Photo Club, each photo submitted by a B-Grade (ie budding) photographer is given feedback by three experienced members, stating what they like about the photo, and what they feel could be improved.

The photos on this page are the awarded B-Grade photos from three recent monthly competitions. Each of the winning photographers have been persistent in entering photos, and these stunning photos are the outcome. Well done to our B-Grade photographers!

If you are keen to improve your photography, email us at info@rockyphotoclub.org.au and we will get in touch with you about how you can join the club and start (or continue) your photographic journey.

TOP PICKS OF THE WEEK

FRIDAY DODGEBALL: A TRUE UNDERDOG STORY

7MATE, 810pm

The jokes come thick and fast in this riotous comedy. Ben Stiller (pictured) is way over the top as the sleazy, narcissistic owner of Globo Gym, who wants to take over a nearby gym run by slacker Vince Vaughn. Needing $50,000 to save his club, Vaughn assembles a team of no-hopers to compete in a dodgeball tournament against Stiller. The banter aims low and hits every time in one of the finest dumb-but-fun comedy you'll ever see.

SUNDAY A STAR IS BORN

SEVEN, 810pm

Bradley Cooper's directorial debut was a box-office winner, with the heartfelt remake proving that the Hollywood star is a talent behind the camera as well as in front of it. The familiar story follows a musician named Jackson Maine (Cooper), who helps gifted young singer-songwriter Ally Campana (Lady Gaga) find fame, although Jack's numerous personal problems threaten to derail his life. Nominated for eight Oscars, A Star Is Born is undeniably a tearjerker, but it is a convincing take on a well-worn story. Lady Gaga is a revelation in her big-screen role, confirming her as a major acting talent in addition to her status as a modern pop icon.

MONDAY HAVE YOU BEEN PAYING ATTENTION?

WIN, 840pm

Week-in, week-out, the Have You Been Paying Attention? gang are putting their tremendous comedic chemistry and broadband connections to good use, delivering a consistently hilarious show every week without even being in the same room. With consummate quizmaster Tom Gleisner at the helm, no topic is off-limits, from unusually named

Aldi products and contentious current affairs to reality

TV and politicians behaving badly. This week, Gleisner is joined by regular Sam Pang, radio presenter Ash London and The Masked Singer judge Urzila Carlson, along with comedians Lloyd Langford and Tim McDonald, to see who can remember the most about the week in news.

Ash London appears in Have You Been Paying Attention?

TUESDAY STACEY DOOLEY: LOCKED UP WITH THE LIFERS

SBS VICELAND, 10.35pm

Never one to shy away from tough topics, English journalist Stacey Dooley is at one of America's most radical women's prisons, Iowa Correctional Institution for Women. Warden Sheryl Dahm is determined to make a difference in the facility, reconsidering the way her inmates are treated. Historically, prison rules are created to control violent men, but the women who end up in her care are more likely to be victims of violence and as such, Dahm is trying a different approach. Dooley is keen to discover how allowing therapy dogs, makeup and sartorial freedoms is affecting life in the facility, particularly for the 10 per cent of inmates serving life sentences.

Industry Today

Showcasing industry in the Central Queensland region

QMEA Students visit Adani's Rugby Run solar farm in Moranbah, Queensland.

Krupali Joshi receives a workplace award for saving a man who fell onto a railway track in Melbourne.

From India to Australia

It's 9.30pm on a cold winter's night, and the hustle and bustle of inner-city Melbourne life is slowly starting to fade away as patrons at the usually busy East Richmond train station head home to their families. There are a few people lingering on the platforms, waiting for their trains.

Krupali Joshi, a cleaning worker on night shift, glances around at the nearby platforms and spots a rubbish bin on the platform opposite to where she is standing, overflowing with discarded coffee cups and empty crisp packets.

As she heads over to start the clean-up, she notices a heavily intoxicated man standing by the edge of the nearest platform, swaying and muttering incoherently.

After a moment he takes an unsteady step closer to the edge of the platform and slips over the edge on to the train tracks. Ms Joshi quickly rushes over, only to find the man lying flat on his back with blood gushing from his head.

"Before I really realised what was happening, he fell from the platform onto the tracks with a loud bang," she said. "I immediately went to check on him, and that's when I saw him lying on the tracks with blood streaming from his head, cuts and bruises all over."

Ms Joshi called her colleague over for help, and the pair sprang into action.

"I panicked when I realised the next train was only eight minutes away. I knew I had to do something, or this man was going to die on the tracks," she said.

Within minutes, Ms Joshi was able to contact the station's signal operator to stop the incoming train, and together with her colleague she was able to pull the unconscious man from the tracks and up onto the platform to safety.

The man was then taken by ambulance to the nearest hospital where he received medical treatment before later being released into police custody. Ms Joshi and her colleague both received awards for their bravery from their employer.

For the 22-year-old, who is working part-time as a cleaner while completing her Masters degree, this moment is much more than just a case of being in the right place at the right time.

Born into an underprivileged family in the city of Ahmedabad in India, where world-class education is a luxury few can afford, Ms Joshi dreamed of one day being able to travel the world, pursue a successful career and receive a university education.

A motivated, driven young girl with ambition and aspiration, Ms Joshi's parents wanted to be able to provide her with the opportunity to fulfil her dreams despite their financial limitations, so they applied for enrolment in the Adani Foundation's Vidya Mandirs, a school for gifted underprivileged children.

Ms Joshi passed the mandatory admissions exam with flying colours and was granted entry into Adani Vidya Mandir, where she completed her high school studies and discovered her exceptional sporting talents as a track and field athlete, collecting countless medals along the way.

Since 2008, the Adani Vidya Mandirs in Ahmedabad (Gujarat), Bhadrashwar (Gujarat) and Surguja (Chhattisgarh) have been providing cost-free education to over 2000 children from low income families.

For Ms Joshi, being a part of Adani Vidya

Mandir was about much more than just an education.

"I am the person I am today because of the Adani Foundation and Dr Priti Adani's help and vision," she said.

Ms Joshi not only secured a position to study a prestigious Master of Business Analytics at Deakin University, but she also received an academic scholarship due to achieving a distinction (GPA 7) in her undergraduate studies.

Adani Foundation has undertaken extensive work over many years in India to support the education of thousands of children across the country. Now Adani is extending its efforts in education to Australia.

Head of Communications for Adani Australia, Kate Campbell, said education was a major and passionate focus of Adani's community program.

"No matter the country you grow up in, there is a universal understanding of the importance of education in helping people to get ahead by exposing them to worlds and opportunities that might otherwise be unknown or out of reach," Ms Campbell said.

"That is why at Adani we are so passionate about ensuring as many children as possible, have access to good quality education, and also understand the opportunities and career paths on offer to them.

"With our mining, renewables, and infrastructure assets based in Queensland we have forged partnerships with Queensland-based programs, like the Queensland Minerals and Energy Academy (QMEA) and the North Queensland Cowboys Adopt-a-School programs, to ensure local kids get the benefit of our support."

The NQ Cowboys Adopt-a-School program has encouraged kids in more than 50 schools across North Queensland to eat well, play well, stay well for more than 15 years.

The Queensland Minerals and Energy Academy (QMEA) is a partnership between the QRC and the Queensland Government under its Gateway to Industry Schools program. It has 80 schools participating throughout Queensland, including schools in Townsville, Rockhampton and Mackay.

"We know the potential and capacity of regional Queensland children, provided they have they are supported with a good education and an understanding of the careers on offer," Ms Campbell said.

"The mining industry can provide so many career pathways for students, especially those who are interested in science, maths, engineering and technology, and we are proud to partner with QMEA and the North Queensland Cowboys to support and introduce students to those opportunities, just like Krupali Joshi received in India."

It has now been over a year since Ms Joshi left her family, friends and life in India behind to chase her dreams of a bright future.

A lifetime of perfecting the values of being a self-starter, taking the initiative, and making a contribution, brought Krupali to that moment on the train platform.

"I have been given these amazing opportunities through the Adani Foundation's work, and I just want to give back to others in any way that I can."

Supply chain opportunities

Leadership, commitment and collaboration was a robust basis for the formalisation of the Capricorn Enterprise Industry Group (CEIG).

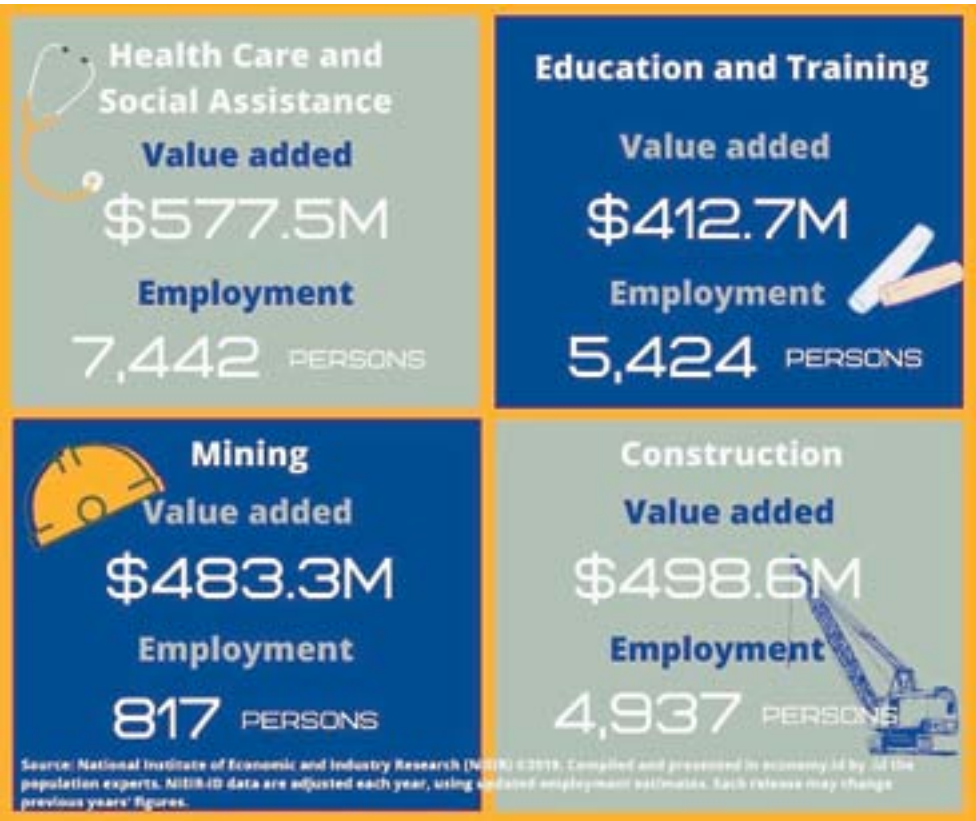

The group welcomes a range of key professionals from a variety of backgrounds working to promote local industry and supply chain capability, develop strategies to accommodate skill shortages, act as a proactive lobby group, and influence legislation and ‘red tape’ regulations impacting on regional development.

Building from the success and accomplishment of many other Queensland regional centres that have benefitted from industry collaboration, CEIG members across private and public sectors are set to implement strategies and find solutions to securing growth, partnership opportunities and accelerate desired infrastructure projects that benefit our local communities and provide economic stimulus to ensure our region continues moving forward.

Acknowledging the emerging opportunities on our doorstep due to an unprecedented infrastructure investment of over $4 billion, Capricorn Enterprise has been collaborating for years to harness regional business capacity and capability with linkages to all major projects currently underway.

Capricorn Enterprise regional development manager Neil Lethlean said: “The CEIG is working in partnership with relevant industry stakeholders in sectors such as education, health, food and agriculture, professional services and manufacturing, to facilitate an expanded economic base for the region.

“This can be achieved by promoting the region as a location to live, work and play, investigating new economic opportunities, promoting best practice principals and facilitating development and training initiatives that support industry growth and wellbeing.”

Providing a corridor for industry players to access the decision-makers and drivers of major projects and the significant sectors within our region, the CEIG is harnessing the knowledge, experience and capability of members presenting a unified and professional interface for those major project proponents moving into the region as well as established industry sectors seeking to maximise local content and involvement.

Capricorn Enterprise CEO Mary Carroll said: “Capricorn Enterprise Industry Group and other industry groups in Queensland such as Toowoomba Surat Basin Enterprise, Central Highlands Development Corporation, Gladstone Engineering Alliance, Townsville Enterprise and Mackay/Whitsunday’s Resource Industry Network and Greater Whitsunday Alliance, support their associated regions through a very simple strategy of assisting businesses of all sizes grow and working together to promote the sustainable economic growth.

“Recognising the importance of investment attraction, economic growth, and infrastructure development, independent industry groups contribute to relocating a broad range of businesses to their regions, increased job growth plus supporting vital infrastructure developments. “Locally, initial work with specific industry sectors within Livingstone and Rockhampton local government area’s has identified the significant direct and indirect contribution that service industries add to our region in both employment and the economic value add.”

Data for the Health Care and Social Assistance and Education and Training industries show that these sectors were important contributors to total employment (50,727 persons) and the total value added by industry ($5712.6 million) to our region in 2018/19.

In comparison, mining had employment of 817 persons (1.6 per cent) and value added of $483.3 million (8.5 per cent), while construction had employment of 4937 persons (9.7 per cent) and value added of $498.6 million (8.7 per cent).

The Capricorn Enterprise Industry Group are scheduled to meet every six weeks.

New life for historic site

By Matthew Pearce

Change is in the wind for the old Central Queensland Cement site on Yaamba Road, with the iconic location to become a prestige industrial estate.

JRT executive manager Brad Neven said Jason Thomasson, current owner and director of JRT, had acquired the site from Sibelco and planned to subdivide it into a premier industrial precinct, Lily Place.

“We have all our approvals in place from the relevant bodies and we’re currently engaged a demolition company who are in the midst of demolishing the old cement works,” he said.

“The chimney is already gone and once they’ve removed all of the excess material we can begin the subdivision.”

Mr Neven said JRT already had contracts on two of the blocks and interest in three other sites before beginning advertising.

“We really want to make sure we get the right tenants,” he said.

“It’s a premier site, it’s on the highway, it’s on the northern entrance to Rockhampton and the Ring Road is going to be 400-500 metres down the road.

“This is a prime position for Industrial businesses to set up shop, giving them access to the west, south and north

Some buildings and a shed will be left on the land to be utilised by JRT and we’ll be keeping six silos which will be decorated with murals by local artists.”

Mr Neven said there would be consultation with the community as to the theme of the murals, possibly something locally themed like “barras, bull, the islands, the crocodile farm or an Indigenous theme”.

“They’re an iconic part of the region’s history and we want to make sure they’re retained and compliment the region’s already impressive tourism capacity,” he said.

“The silos will put us on the Australian Silo Trail, replacing Monto as the northern-most silos.”

He said the redevelopment would drive significant economic benefit to the local community.

“This is a heavy industrial site that’s being repurposed that’s going to create jobs for the region because businesses are going to invest and build there,” he said.

SMW group CEO Jack Trenaman started as an apprentice at Central Queensland Cement in 1988 and worked his way up the maintenance manager position by the end of his 14 years on the site.

“It had a good culture and good people as well as a good system for apprentices.

“All the apprentices worked through multiple disciplines, they were either fitters and turners or electricians.

“As fitters and turners we all covered the trade of diesel fitters, motor mechanics and boiler makers. We did a lot of internal machining and would make a lot of parts ourselves.

“The electricians would spend time at the fitters’ sheds and we’d spend time in the electrical shed where they’d show us voltage work and isolation, all the dos and don’ts.”

This cross skilling of trades is what SMW Group does with their apprentices today, something that Mr Trenaman says makes them highly sought after.

Mr Trenaman left in the early 2000s and worked as part of the team that converted the cement kiln to a lime kiln.

“It was the only rotary kiln in the world that manufactured that variety of products from one kiln, only because of blokes like ourselves who wouldn’t take no for an answer,” he said.

Merv Barton was the last general manager before CQ Cement was downsized from a fully integrated cement and lime manufacturing plant to focusing on special products under Pacific Lime.

He’s proud of the number of apprentices that went through the business’s doors, with CQ Cement putting on a minimum of one electrical and one mechanical apprentice a year until the early ‘90s.

“A lot of apprentices have done really well on the international scene, managing very large corporations, it was a good grounding for them,” he said.

“Quote a number of us oldies pre-Covid used to meet regularly for lunch. It’s a friendly company, like all families you squabble among yourselves but at the end of the day you’re still friends.”

Mr Barton said he was happy to see JRT “breathe new life into the place” with their industrial estate plans.

The early history of Central Queensland Cement

The following notes have been compiled for members of the Central Queensland Speleological Society for assistance with research into the early history of Central Queensland Cement Pty Ltd. Information sources were company records, a document titled “Building a Plant - The Early History of C.Q. Cement” by W. Hoskins and the popular recollections of various present and past company staff.

Events Preceding The Formation Of Central Queensland Cement.

The Central Queensland region is an area rich in natural resources and in the 1890s a strong push for a separate colony based on Rockhampton almost succeeded.

In the 1950s a new organisation named the Capricornia New State Movement was formed with strong encouragement from the Rockhampton Chamber of Commerce.

Members of these groups believed the wealth of Central Queensland was being siphoned off to the south-east area of Queensland without adequate return to the central region.

Although resource rich the Rockhampton region was in crisis with significant numbers of unemployed and it was felt by many at local and State level that a secondary industry such as a cement plant was essential.

Mineral (limestone) leases in the Mt Etna region had been held since the 1930s by a Mr Donald L. Fraser with other leases held by Mt Morgan Ltd and Mr Berserker Pilkington.

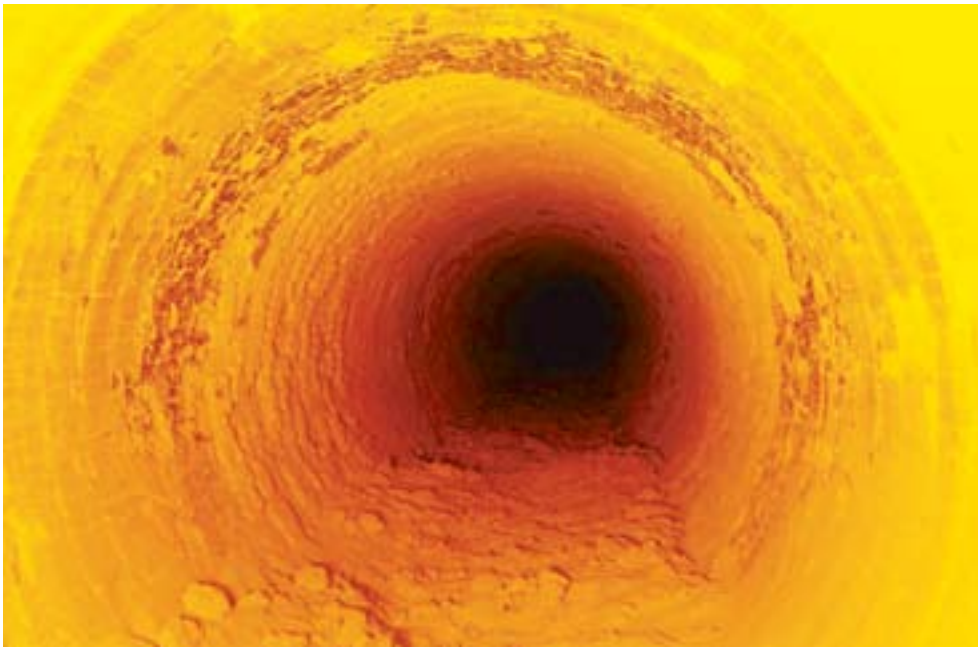

Mr Pilkington operated a quarry and lime burning operation on Limestone Ridge until closure in the mid 1960s.

It is believed that Mr Pilkington served his apprenticeship with Mt Morgan Ltd as a mechanical fitter and turner in the steam-driven powerhouse and at the outbreak of World War I joined the Royal Navy.

On discharge from the Navy at cessation of hostilities, Mr Pilkington married and returned to Australia to commence (for the times) the technically advanced lime burning operation, Pilkington and Co., at Mt Etna.

The ruins of the quarry and lime kilns are currently preserved within the Mt Etna Caves National Park as an example of lime burning operations of the era.

In 1957 a series of events occurred which forced a number actions by Central Qld Cement's parent company Qld Cement Ltd.

In this year the Nicklin Country Party/Liberal Party Coalition was voted into office and this government was enthusiastic about development in Central Queensland.

At this stage the push for a cement industry in the region commenced in earnest.

It is believed that Mr Pilkington, using locally sourced raw materials, manufactured small quantities of cement in his laboratory at Mt Etna and took the samples overseas for use during negotiations with a major international cement manufacturing company.

Mr Pilkington also made approaches to Qld Cement Ltd in a bid to form a partnership, which ultimately proved futile.

From these events two main contenders for the establishment of a cement industry in Central Qld emerged.

On 30 July, 1959, Qld Cement Ltd incorporated a private company Hartley Investment Pty Ltd with the intention to quietly acquire mining leases in the Glenmore area.

These lease applications were strongly opposed by a local family who would be affected by any mining operation and the Rockhampton City Council as the area was to be included in the future town plan.

Also formed was Limestone Leases Pty Ltd a company founded by Mr William R. Thompson who had recently acquired limestone leases on Mt Etna. Other significant shareholders were Berserker and Evelyn May Pilkington.

It was reported in the local press that this company had made application to the Qld Government for a guarantee on bank loans for the establishment of a cement plant at Camoo Siding on the south-west side of Mt Etna and that this application was favourably received by the government.

The Formation Of Central Queensland Cement

On 19 October, 1959, The Articles of Association of Hartley Investments Pty Ltd were rescinded and on 20 October, 1959, a resolution changing the company name to Central Queensland Cement Pty Ltd was passed by the board of Qld Cement.

Ownership of the company was Qld Cement Ltd 75 per cent and North Australian Cement Ltd 25 per cent (NAC L was approximately 40 per cent owned by QCL).

Events Leading To The Establishment Of A Cement Plant

An announcement was made that Central Qld Cement planned to establish a distribution facility at Parkhurst, just north of Rockhampton, and to rail bulk cement from the QC L - Darra manufacturing site.

This decision was based on the company's research that the local market was too small for the economic establishment of a full cement plant and it was stated that a limited manufacturing facility (ie: a grinding plant based on clinker railed from Darra) would be built when annual sales in the local region reached 17,000 tonnes and a full plant considered when sales figures reached 25,000 tonnes.

This announcement drew considerable criticism from the local business community who had an expectation that construction of a fully integrated cement plant was imminent.

The reaction of this group of influential people was to form the Central Queensland

The historic site of CQ Cement is entering a new future as an industrial estate.

Cement Investigation Syndicate with Mayor Aid. RBJ Pilbeam elected chairman.

This group continued the pressure for a cement plant in Rockhampton with a vigorous media campaign and representation to the State Government.

Co-incidental with this campaign, Limestone Leases Pty Ltd placed an advertisement in the local newspaper calling for expressions of interest for the establishment of a cement plant in Rockhampton.

The building of a plant

In September 1960 Central Queensland Cement announced an immediate start on construction of a cement grinding and bagging plant at Parkhurst using clinker railed from Darra and when operational, construction of a full cement plant would begin.

It is of interest that local cement sales had not yet reached 15,000 tonnes.

Limestone Leases Pty Ltd were still attempting to establish their own operation with a new application (supported by the Rockhampton Trades and Labour Council, the Chamber of Commerce and the District Development Association) to the State Government Industries Assistance Board for a Government Guarantee.

The application was refused by Cabinet.

Due to the previously mentioned objections to the Glenmore mineral leases and technical problems associated with the limestone (ie: chemical composition) Central Queensland Cement decided to seek alternate mineral leases within economic distance of the proposed new plant.

In the early 1960s the company embarked on a purchasing program to acquire existing mineral leases and title to strategic freehold land in the Mt Etna area with the following leases subsequently purchased.

- Mineral lease 281 (current title M L 5765) purchased from Evelyn May Pilkington.
- Mineral lease 307 (current title M L 5766) purchased from Berserker Pilkington.
- Mineral lease 236 purchased from Berserker Pilkington.
- Mineral lease 243 purchased from Berserker Pilkington.
- Mineral lease 326 (current title M L 5767) purchased from William Ross Thompson.
- Mineral lease 340 (current title M L 5768) purchased from William Ross Thompson.

Construction of the new cement plant at Parkhurst and crushing and screening plant at Mt Etna was completed during 1966.

Mining operations on the eastern slopes of Mt Etna commenced mid year in preparation for commissioning of the cement plant in September 1966.

A vertical lime kiln and hydration plant was added to the Parkhurst operation in 1967.

From the outset conservationists protested against mining on Mt Etna out of concern for the maternity site of the Little Bent Wing Bat and the potential destruction of various cave systems.

In November 1973 Central Queensland Cement surrendered mineral leases 236 and 243 to the Qld Government to assist with formation of the Fitzroy Caves National Park and protection of the breeding site of the vulnerable Ghost Bat on Limestone Ridge.

Awards night for industry

Six winners were presented with prestigious awards on Thursday, 15 October at Gladstone Engineering Alliance's 17th annual Industry Awards Night.

Held on the waterfront at Auckland House, the cocktail event was a success with key members of the region's supply chain community presenting awards to the deserving winners, such as the Minister for Regional Development and Manufacturing, Glenn Butcher; Joe Rea of Coaching Capability Company; Royale Lisle of Aestec Services; GEA board president Anthony Buenen; and the Beale, Peachey and Calis families of which three awards are in memorial of.

Gladstone Engineering Alliance general manager Chantale Lane, who also received a gift of flowers for her efforts of running the organisation throughout the Covid-19 pandemic, said they couldn't have asked for a better venue for the event.

"Auckland House was top notch with their service and food. The whole event raised the bar with the venue, entertainment and cocktail-style format that was ideal for networking and celebrating excellence in business."

"Congratulations to all the winners of our six awards - the competition was of such a high standard they all deserved the recognition."

Thanks to local businesses CQ Party Hire, 7 Whales in Moscow, Photopia Studios, Zeta Ware and Auckland House for helping to make the event a success."

The winners of the awards were: The Innovator Award - McCosker Contracting; The Safety Excellence Award - SOLAFT Filtration Systems; The Beale Culture Award - Xtreme Engineering; The Forty Calis Memorial Award - Daniel McDonald; The Wayne Peachey Memorial Award - Bert Thomas; GEA Hall of Fame Inductees - Marilyn and Ian Rayment.

The Innovator Award went to McCosker Contracting at the Gladstone Engineering Alliance's Industry Awards Night.

Solaft won the Safety Excellence Award.

Bob McCosker with his Innovator Award.

Daniel McDonald won the Forty Calis Award.

Bert Thomas won the Wayne Peachey Award.

Marilyn and Ian Rayment, GEA Hall of Fame Award.

Xtreme Engineering with the Beale Culture Award.

Daniel Osborne was the first CQUniversity student to take part in Laing O'Rourke's Graduate Program.

Laing program headstart

Daniel Osborne has gotten a leg up in the industry as the first CQUniversity student to take part in Laing O'Rourke's Graduate Program.

Laing O'Rourke is proud to have been voted as one of the top 10 graduate employers today in the Australian Association of Graduate Employers 2020 list, maintaining its position as an industry leader in attracting emerging talent.

Their Graduate Program combines practical experience, technical learning and professional development.

Daniel attended school at Rockhampton's

Emmaus College and went on to study a Bachelor of Engineering (Electrical) with Honours at CQU.

He also completed a Diploma of Professional Practice.

"I was working with another company and ended up attending a careers day where I introduced myself to the people from Laing O'Rourke who advised me of their Graduate Program," he said.

"I ended up getting a job with Laing O'Rourke working for nine months at Australia-Singapore Military Training Initiative (ASMTI) at Shoalwater Bay and since then have been transferred to Adelaide where I'm working on another project at the Osborne Naval Shipyard."

Daniel recommended Laing O'Rourke's Graduate Program to anyone, saying it was of great benefit to young cadets completing their studies at university.

The program features diverse on-the-job experience complemented by an engaging series of learning modules, helping to build the right blend of personal and professional skills.

Graduates are mentored by experienced leaders, and enjoy strong support from line managers and a large peer group network.

Laing O'Rourke works closely with the graduates to develop clear career goals, expand their skills and assist them in working towards the relevant chartership.

On completion, graduates continue to benefit from ongoing support from the graduate development team and a network of business contacts, as they move into a permanent role within the business.

Cool styles for the heat

Now that we're back into our warm weather wear, we're reaching for fabrics and styles that will help to keep us cool.

For most of us that means natural fibres, and in particular cotton and linen. Cotton and linen are both lovely lightweight fabrics that are breathable and absorb moisture, but their ability to dry quickly allows the heat to escape and for you to feel more comfortable.

Lindell Lutton from Rockhampton has chosen striped linen pants for her classic elegant look, accompanied by a silky top.

The muted rust of the stripe and the blouse are a perfect colour for Lindell, she's an autumn who suits rich muted warm colours.

The vertical stripes of the trousers are a great way to lengthen the leg, especially as they're an ankle grazer style, which Lindell has emphasised with a pair of tan ankle strap sandals.

The silky blouse is a simple but pretty foil for the trousers and has both a flattering and on-trend sleeve style with the flutter sleeve. Fuller open sleeves like flutter styles, puff, bell or even petal are great to cover the upper arm but still allow air movement to keep you cooler.

Lindell has accessorised her outfit with classic gold jewellery which harmonises so beautifully with the colours she's wearing.

Lindy Williams from Gracemere is wearing a simple cotton/linen blend shift dress in a peach/nude tone.

Shift dresses, especially ones like this in a cotton/linen blend, are a great choice on a warm day as they allow plenty of air movement around the body and don't cling.

They're also a great choice for skimming over tummies, hips or thighs! Lindy describes her style as eclectic, and so her use of a very simple plain shift is a smart way to make the most of her accessories.

Here she's made a focal point of her quirky big heart pendant, but has also teamed a cute pair of leopard print slides with an animal print bracelet and finished it off with a coordinating dark brown bag. Using accessories in this way is a really easy way to elevate what would otherwise have been a pretty bland outfit.

If you'd like to know more about better expressing your style or finding out the colours that best suit you, contact me at Imagine You for a consultation.

Around 2000 people flocked down in their sharpest suits and fanciest dresses on Saturday for the 2020 Caulfield Cup day races at Callaghan Park. The Rockhampton Jockey Club said it was a successful day considering all the restrictions that were in place. Enjoy the photos taken by PHAT NGUYEN on the day. ## The platypus of plants

Have you noticed an orange flowering tree in bloom around the Rockhampton region at the moment?

There are numerous specimens growing along Moores Creek Road, Kerrigan Street and Frenchville Road and the hills surrounding Mount Morgan.

The tree itself is an oddity with orange pea shaped flowers, rose like thorns, seeds used in making jewellery, corky bark used for making floats for fishing nets, wood that was used as brake blocks for horse and bullock-drawn vehicles and also used in making polo balls and the leaves are totally unique, as they are shaped like the Batman symbol.

The soft timber of this tree was also highly regarded by the Aborigines, as it could be used as a base for fire-lighting by friction and a tea made from the dried leaves to be used a sedative.

The tree is the Bat's Wing Coral or Erythrina vespertilio, a semi-deciduous tree native to northern New South Wales to northern half of Queensland and across the Northern Territory to northern Western Australia.

In fact, the tree is well named as Erythrina comes from the Greek word erythros, red and vespertilio is Latin for bat. The common name for this tree refers to the bat-shaped leaves and the light-coloured cork-like bark.

Erythrina vespertilio is a small, open tree that will tolerate dry conditions and growing between six and 10 metres high. Around this time of year, while the tree is temporarily leafless, masses of 3-4cm long, orange-red pea-shaped flowers hang from the tree. The nectar of these flowers is like a magnet to honey-eating birds. Following the flowers are brown woody seedpods and it should be noted that the seeds are toxic.

The thorns on this tree are unusual for a tree of this type and can easily catch you. I know from experience as a young boy, I gained a scar the length of my hand from grabbing hold of a tree while walking down the mountainside near my home.

The Bat's Wing Coral trees are easy to grow, provided they can be protected from frost and hungry animals in their early years but could provide an interesting conversation piece in garden.

Stunning Arctotis

I have received some enquiries about a brilliant pink flowering groundcover growing in the Lammermoor beach car park. The plant is an Arctotis or commonly known as African daisies. They are not to be confused with Osteosperma (formerly Dimeothecas).

These days, there are many spectacular flowering Arctotis hybrids that are ideal as ground covers, borders or even as a colourful cover for sloping gardens or embankments. Being hardy, sun-loving plants, they can handle just about any type of environment, though being well mulched may be required in certain well-drained soils.

The dense silver foliage and colourful blooms of the Arctotis make an eye-catching feature in any garden. The range of flower colours includes variations of red, white, yellow, pink, orange and mauve, with contrasting centres.

It should be noted that on cloudy days, or even as the afternoon shadows fall upon the plant, the flowers will close up, and sometimes they will tend to flower on the sunnier side of the garden first. Many of our country gardeners could even select this plant as a western-side feature in their gardens without fear that it will collapse after the first hot dry winds of summer.

Taming land of extremes

By AgForce Drought Committee Chair
Mark Collins

Dorothea McKellar was spot on when she described Australia as a land of droughts and flooding rains, of beauty and of terror.

That pretty much sums up life on the land in Queensland!

The majority of the state remains in drought, as it has for the past seven or eight years, but the recent declaration of the La Nina means that those ‘flooding rains’ – not to mention destructive weather like cyclones – are more than likely on their way.

We are also coming into a bushfire season that is predicted to be longer, drier and more dangerous than ever before.

But we’ve come a long way in terms of managing our extremes of weather in the 110 years since Dorothea penned those famous words.

We have improved the way we predict and prepare for weather extremes, how we clean up afterwards, and the support governments and the community provide to producers and their communities.

But there is so much more that can be done, and regional Queenslanders need to know that governments have their backs – especially if our agriculture industry is to continue to produce food that is clean, green and sustainable and pump $18 billion into the economy.

As we decide who is going to lead the state for the next four years, all parties need to commit to providing practical and appropriate support in genuine consultation with industry.

Government must be flexible and imaginative in providing this support.

For example, we have been asking the state government to implement a number of measures such as removing stamp duty on agricultural insurance and adopting the AgForce Agricultural Business Cycle.

Another thing that will really help is regulatory reform conducted in genuine collaboration with people who live on the land.

Prime example: the restrictive vegetation management laws that prevent landholders from managing bushfire risk effectively and that created so much devastation over the last few fire seasons.

The ag industry and regional communities are keen to work with whichever party forms government on solutions to this country’s cycle of beauty and terror.

We need them to commit to the same.

Agforce's Mark Collins.

CQUniversity students recognised for academic work

More than 140 CQUniversity students have had their outstanding academic achievements recognised in the CQUniCares Academic Prize Showcase, which was recently released online.

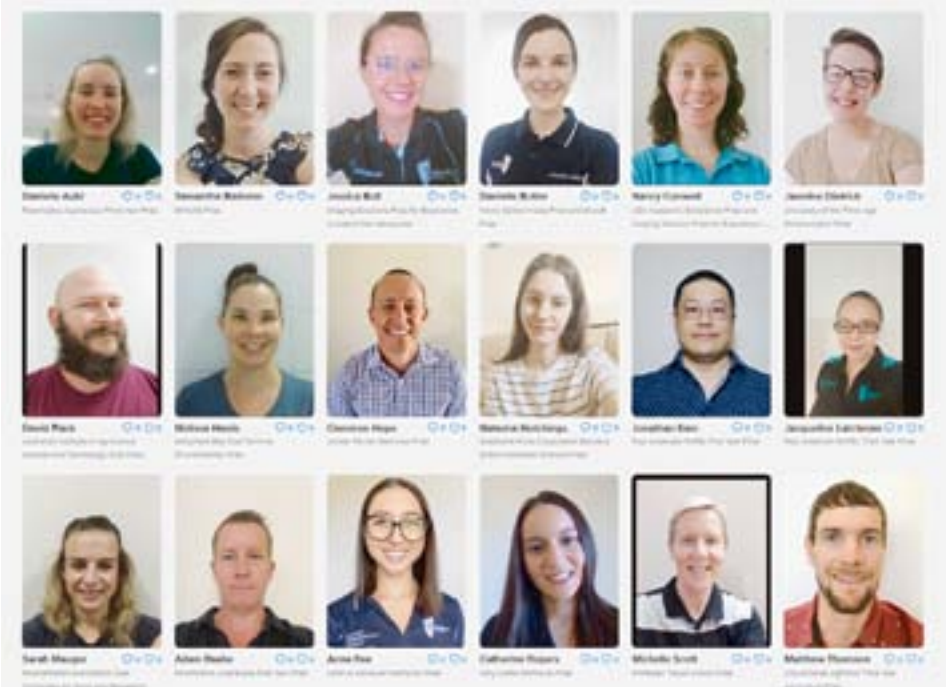

Due to Covid-19 restrictions, the decision was made to go virtual this year instead of hosting the annual on-campus and livestreamed event. The showcase features many of the traditional elements of the event, delivered through short videos from the Vice-Chancellor, Associate Vice-Presidents, and Deans of Schools.

An important new element of the virtual showcase is the ability to feature statements from the prize winners, who were invited to submit a short video thanking their donors and highlighting the prizes they received and their study progress.

Dr Philip Donaldson Nursing Memorial Prize recipient, Maddison Dundas said: “I am so honoured to receive this award. It has been a huge push to keep going and achieve my dreams. I received the email when I was ready to throw in the towel. It has definitely been a source of encouragement to keep going.”

The academic prizes awarded in 2020 are supported by generous donations from more than 100 individuals and organisations.

This year, Rockhampton Regional Council celebrated their 50-year milestone of continuous support for CQUniversity students through academic prizes.

The 2019 CQUniCares Academic Prize winners from the School of Health, Medical and Applied Sciences.

The council currently provides the Rockhampton Regional Council Prize, which is awarded to the Rockhampton region Associate Degree of Engineering (Civil) student who achieves the highest Grade Point Average.

In a virtual address, CQUniversity Vice-Chancellor and President Professor Nick Klomp congratulated the prize-winning students.

“Our students’ hard work, commitment to their studies and high achievements are acknowledged through an academic prize, made possible thanks to the support and generosity of more than 100 donors, both individuals and organisations who believe in the transformative power of education,” Prof Klomp said.

“To our donors, please know that your support really does change lives.

“For many students, just knowing that someone believes in them is enough of an investment in their education. If you believe enough to invest in their education that can be the biggest gamechanger of all. Your belief allows them to believe in themselves and spurs them on in a journey that can at times, be challenging.

“CQUniversity is delighted to partner with individuals and organisations who join with us in our mission to deliver life-changing access to education by recognising and celebrating academic excellence and supporting students to achieve success.”

Storms are on the way

By Weather Forecaster Mike Griffin

Capricornia lawns and rural grasslands have been extremely dry with almost two months of only single-figure rainfall.

Monday's 34C was the hottest day in six months.

As the wind dropped to calm on the Kerpels, boaties got six hours in before the NNE sea breeze belted in - gusting over 20 knots - causing the flat seas to ramp up to a metre in quick time. The breeze arrived in Rocky taking a degree off the maximum.

In the Central Highlands, on Tuesday signs of what was to come as middle level cloud that stretched from Longreach to Blackall moved east.

Luke Offed texted me a photo of the scalloping or mackerel like cloud which is almost always a forerunner for afternoon storm development for the Tropic of Capricorn.

As maximums reached 36C at Blackwater and 37C at Moranbah the storms popped up from Clermont/Woorabinda/Baralaba/Dingo and Tieri.

Rockyites who looked west during the evening could see the flicker of the early evening storms in the west - more night time flickering to come!

The extra moisture available near the Capricorn/CH border helped develop mid-evening storms at Ruined Castle and Isla Delusion with 34mm and 36mm respectively.

Then Rockhampton woke on Wednesday morning to a cloudy to overcast 22.8C minimum. The hottest in seven months. This is looking like the normal "tease" for October storms.

FORECAST

The Wednesday morning satellite photo shows the middle level cloud with the embedded storms in red on the Darling Downs. Storms will develop on the cloud band edge from Dalby north to Gayndah/Biloela and Shoalwater Bay and track to the coast. We might be lucky?

Looking west on the synoptic chart, a 993Hpa low is developing in South Australia.

On the Sat Pic a line of middle level cloud from Avon Downs south to west of Birdsville has morning storms "in red" near Alice Springs.

This is a strong indication the cloud band will increase in size until it covers most of Queensland and extend south to NSW/VIC. A line of storms should hit the Central West Friday then Emerald Saturday and Capricornia Sunday and Monday.

This cloudband should cause significant rainfall for many places across eastern Australia and reach the coast from as far north as Townsville and include Mackay/Brisbane/Sydney/Bega/Canberra. We are in the mix if the fickle storm nature does not split near Gracemere.

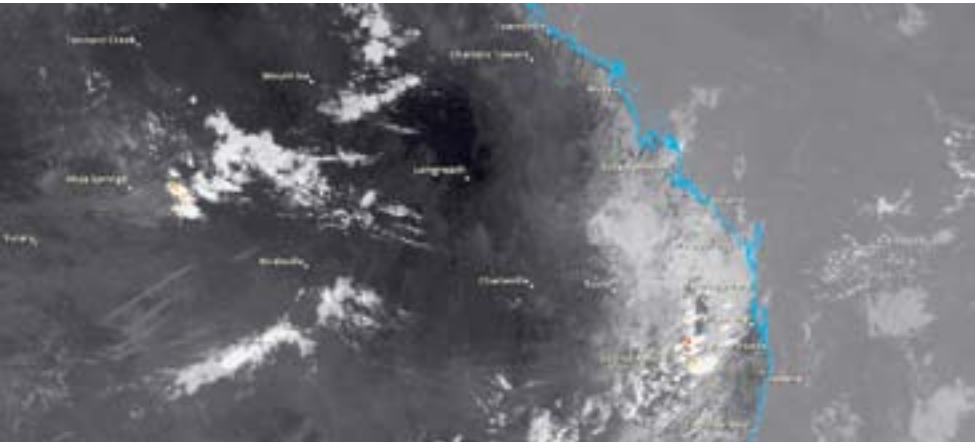

This event may affect the AFL Grand Final in Brisbane on Saturday.

Will the older Ablett/Selwood get bogged and Dusted off with the Lynching power of the Tigers?

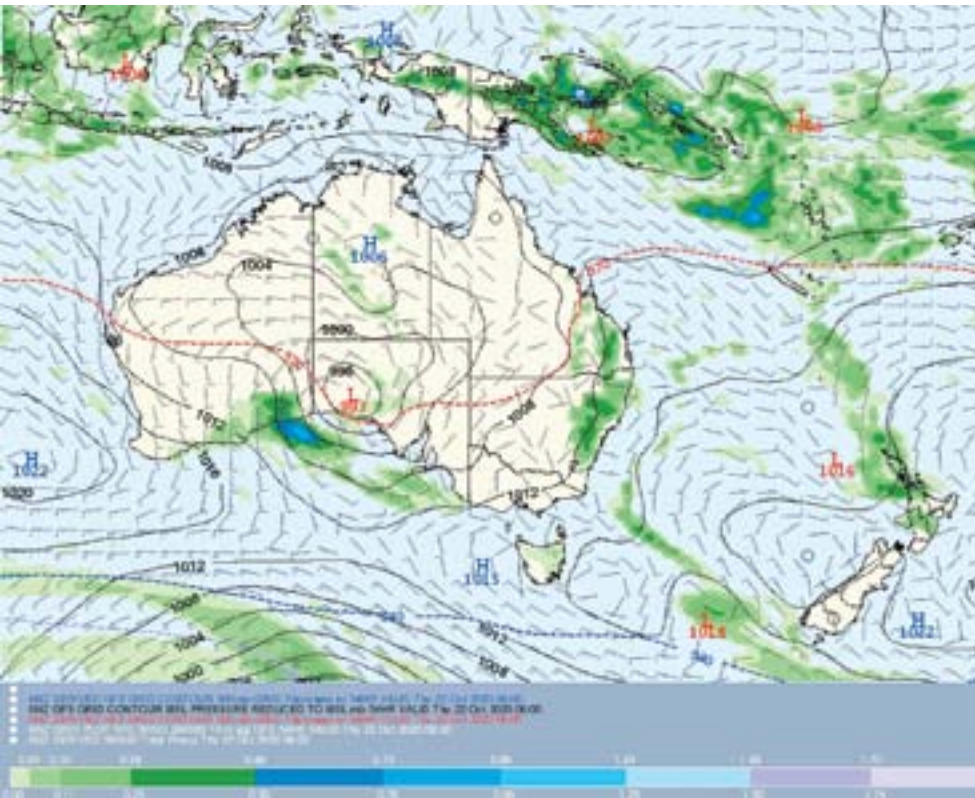

The cloudband should affect Sydney on Sunday and affect the NRL Grand Final.

Will the "Storm on the ground" and in the air be an omen for our Rocky Munster and the retiring Smith? Or will the young son and the father coached Panthers pull off a miracle!

A very interesting week to come.

The Wednesday morning Satellite photo shows the middle level cloud with the embedded storms in red on the Darling Downs.

Fishing with Hooked Fishing Charters

They were fishing for fun

Hooked Fishing Charters held their Fish for Fun event once again this week.

Hooked Fishing Charters' best guides went down to show the students of Heights College a thing or two about catching fish.

And, impressively, the students took to it like naturals - catching a plethora of fish on a great day out for all. Here are some photos that captured the action.

CQ Today would like to thank Hooked Fishing Charters for their continued support and great photos.

Paige Brady.

Ashton Higgins and Isabella Hutton were all smiles.

Pippa Sherwood had a great day out.

Caitlin Warcon and Sonai Maru had a great, relaxing day.

A record-breaker retires

By Liam Emerton

Six-time AFL Capricornia premiership-winning coach Mark Wallin has called time on his incredible coaching career.

CQ Today learned on Tuesday that Wallin had stepped down from the head coaching role at the Yeppoon Swans, finishing on 89 consecutive wins and breaking a national record in the process.

Wallin coached for seven seasons and made the grand final in every season that he was at the helm of the Swans.

Six of those, from 2014 to 2020, earned the club a flag and five of those seasons were won undefeated.

Wallin is arguably the most successful coach that the local AFL competition has ever seen, coaching the most consistent team to ever grace a Central Queensland field.

Wallin told CQ Today he was always thinking about hanging the whistle up this season, and there was no better time to hand the reins over to someone new.

"It was a decision I made over the course of the year," said Wallin.

"There were certain things I wanted to tick off before I did.

"The record and the premiership were all taken into consideration.

"I sat back with my wife and thought about another year, but there are so many things that we want to do as a couple next year.

"And I think it's really important for the playing group to improve and get a different voice to reignite and keep the fire burning for another five or six years."

Wallin said it was a difficult choice, but he believes now is the right time to step down.

"It was an extremely hard decision because it's something that I love doing," he said.

"I love the group, I love the club and I've got some really good mates and I've had some great memories over the years.

"And even to this point now, I ask myself: 'have I done the right thing?', but I know I have.

"It relieves a bit of pressure as well.

"Hopefully the playing group will get someone really good in and keep the fire going."

Wallin couldn't decide on his most memorable coaching moment, but he did manage to pick some highlights.

"There's too many to have just one favourite," he said.

"The 2015 grand final, after losing 2014, was pretty special and it was the first one for the club for a long time.

"It just meant so much to the group, and that was a real special moment.

"This year felt very similar to 2015 because it had the 89 wins and six premierships, which built up a lot of pressure over the months.

"Those were probably the two biggest highlights."

President Peter Watkins thanked Wallin for his effort, and congratulated him on a stellar career.

"Obviously it's been enormous since the time he came in," said Watkins.

"We had plenty of ability, we had plenty of talent, and we needed someone to come in and guide it.

"It's what all good coaches do, and that's exactly what Mark came in and did.

"Given his knowledge of all the young talent coming through, and his relationship with them, he was an obvious candidate and he brought out the best of them over those years.

"On behalf of the club, we wish him the very best for the future and you can't retire on a better note than he did this season."

They're celebrating big-time as back-to-back champs

By Liam Emerton

The Emmaus College of Rockhampton has walked away from a tough touch football competition with two big wins.

The Opens Mixed and under-15 teams were crowned Queensland champions of their respective divisions after taking out the All Schools Touch Trophy last week.

It was the second year in a row that the opens side had won the competition where they defeated touch specialist school, Cavenish Road State High School, 7-6 in the final.

The under-15s were able to overcome a strong St Joseph's Toowoomba outfit, 7-4, in their grand final match.

Mixed team coach Gary Benbow said he was delighted by his side's performance.

"I was extremely impressed how they behaved on and off the field," he said.

"They were superb.

"We knew we had to step up another level than what we had done last year to win the title back.

"All players, girls and boys, played beyond their years."

Benbow said there was a noticeable difference in skill from the team this year compared to last year.

"I think there was an improvement especially after last year when they got that winning feeling," he said.

"Most players were in grade 12, in their last year at Emmaus, so they all wanted to go out winners.

"We've been doing a lot of fitness training for the last couple of months and a lot of sessions with the ball.

"It took a lot of little things to get it right.

"And everything seemed to fall out perfectly for us."

Final four are finals ready

By Liam Emerton

The Central Queensland Premier League competition has launched into the finals series, with two massive contests.

The first of those will be a top-of-the-table battle between the minor premiers, the Frenchville Roos, and the second-placed Bluebirds United - with a spot in the grand final up for grabs.

The two teams in the qualifying final have had some recent history, including three games fought out this season.

In two of those encounters the Bluebirds got the edge on their opposition, securing 1-0 wins in both those contests.

However, the most recent of those three matches saw an incredible 4-0 win for Frenchville, which blew Bluebirds out of the water early in the contest.

A change of tactics seemed to catch the Bluebirds off-guard, but the club will be ready for everything this weekend.

The home ground advantage for Frenchville may not be to the side's benefit, given it has failed to beat the Bluebirds at Ryan Park this season.

The winner of that match will be headed to the big dance in two weeks' time - leaving a week off and time to prepare for the grand final.

Both sides are coming off big wins as well, with Bluebirds pulling off a 2-0 win over the strong Berserker Bears FC.

The Bears needed a win to maintain any hope of entering the finals series, but the squad had its hopes dashed when Sam Skinner and Sean Jaspersen scored for United.

Frenchville faced Nerimbera Magpies on Saturday night and it proved to be a display of strength, winning 5-2 in that match.

The Magpies and Bears now bow out of the competition after finishing sixth and fifth respectively.

Gladstone's Central FC will take on the Capricorn Coast Eagles in the do-or-die final at Brian Niven Park, with the loser eliminated from the finals series.

Central FC has been in a three-horse race for the title with Bluebirds United and Frenchville Roos this season, and will need to defeat the Eagles this weekend to battle one of those two teams, as the winner of the elimination final will take on the loser of the qualifying final in Round 2 of the finals series.

In a possible preview of this week's match, Central hosted the Capricorn Coast Eagles on Saturday night and took it to the visitors - smashing them for six goals and conceding just one.

Central's captain and leading goal-scorer Garth Lawrie kept his account rolling with a double on Saturday night, bringing his season tally up to a sensational 16 goals in just 15 games.

Dylan Clark also contributed with a brace as teammates Dylan Walz and Jason Geddes added the remaining two goals.

That Round 15 clash was the third time the two sides had faced off this season, with the other two results being on a similar scale.

In Round 6 Central defeated the Eagles 3-1 and in Round 10 the Gladstone side secured a 7-2 victory over Capricorn Coast.

That means that in the side's previous three meetings this season, Central has scored 16 goals against the Eagles and conceded just four.

Another strong win for the Gladstone-based Central will build its momentum for the remaining final games.

Capricorn Coast will need to cause an upset to progress through the finals any further, but anything is possible - especially with the pressure of an elimination final.

Central FC's Garth Lawrie will need to be on top form this weekend when he comes up against Capricorn Coast.

A different season

By Peter Lawrence

It's not very often you have your pre-season finals near the end of the season, but 2020 has been anything but a normal season. In late March the RTA had to postpone the finals due to Covid restrictions, and on Friday night two of the three finals were finally played. Once again, it was the Cressy Tennis Club that dominated the finals in the B and C grades.

Warren Acutt lead his Cressy Slicers to a commanding win over Ian Bates and his Cressy Alexanders team. The foundation for a big win was set up early in the singles matches, with wins by all three team members and the success continued into the doubles. The Slicers won 36-12.

But C Grade was a much closer match. Roy Pidgeon lead Cressy Slashers to an early lead with wins in the first three sets but perennial runner-up in finals Matt Bright was not to be easily defeated (for the eighth time, mind you). The Acers came back strongly and took the match by winning the last three sets convincingly. The Acers won 27-24. A Grade is yet to play the final, and hopefully this will be played before 2020 ends.

Fixtures continued on Saturday in perfect conditions and it was time for the rivalry round, where Cressy played Cressy and Curwood took on Curwood for bragging rights once again. In A Grade Stone Curwood has come into some strong form late in the season and defeated Bush Curwood in a close match 43-39. The Cressy Wizards continued their good form with a 47-22 smashing of the Cressy Flattops.

There are still two rounds to go before the final, and only the top two teams will make it. Just who it will be is still undecided.

In B Grade, the Cressy Hotshots are the ladder-leaders but they were defeated by a strong Cressy Slicers team, led by Stu England.

The experienced England was too crafty for his opponents and wore them down with his consistent play. Hotshots were missing two of their players, but this was no excuse for the fine play from Slicers. They won 34-32 in a close match. The Cressy Perfects, led by Bruce Hart had an impressive win over Cressy Alexanders 40-33, and in the battle for Curwood bragging rights it was the Curwood Smashers who got up over the Curwood Diamonds 43-37.

The finals will be held in early November, so the last two rounds will crucial for the top teams to keep winning and cement a spot in the top two and make the finals, where it will anyone's guess who will win.

This Friday night will see the running of the RTA Closed Championships, with the playing of singles. The following Friday will see the doubles competition take place.

There should be some close matches in A Grade, with top players Steve Griffin, Maverick Dunbar and Lleyton Parle all playing. The lower grade always see a strong turnout, so look out for consistent performers such as Warren Acutt and Stu England to play well.

Local juniors selected in the state team

By Allan Clarke

In more good news for the city's leading junior table tennis players, Table Tennis Queensland announced honorary state junior teams as well as releasing the annual orders of merit last week.

That follows on from the very good performances from the small band of Rockhampton representatives at the annual Queensland Junior Championships at Brisbane during the recent school holidays.

Newly-crowned state under-15 girls singles champion Emily Steffen was the first chosen in the state team in this age group, and was rated fourth best in the state in the under-18 division, where the selectors combined the performances of both sections as there was only one team competition for these two levels.

Matthew Steffen was rated seventh best in the under-18 boys division and was named in the state side for this age group.

At 10 years of age, Colte Nolan celebrated some solid performances in both teams and individual events in the lower age groups when he was named in the under-11 team, as well as being rated the fifth best player in this section.

Had B teams been named, Nick Green may have got the nod in the under-18 division where he played quite well for most of the four-day carnival and narrowly failed to create what would have been good wins in narrow finishes.

Honorary Queensland teams were chosen in the view that the Australian Junior Championships that were set down to be played in Victoria during early December after the original event scheduled to be staged in West Australia during early July was postponed due to Covid-19.

The Rockhampton Club is currently organising a trip to Bundaberg on Saturday, 7 November, where the annual battle for the Cree Shield will take place.

This year is the 50th year that the two associations have played for a trophy on an annual basis, with the White Shield being the spoils for the initial 25 years. Members of the Rockhampton Association are invited to nominate for teams, and all details are available at the local clubhouse.

The action of the big race

The Lake Awoonga Adventure Race was a hit with 102 adventurers taking to the course. Volunteers and helpers came along to make sure the annual event ran smoothly. The pictures on this page have been supplied by both Hayley Bracewell Photography, and Aerial Media Gladstone's Tim Cheetham. CQ Today would like to thank them for the great action shots, and we hope you enjoy them all.

It was a race of a lifetime

By Andrea Ruppik

The breathtaking Lake Awoonga, or 'The Dam' as it is affectionately known by locals, is the best place to be on a weekend. It is the beauty of Benaraby, the jewel of the Gladstone region and the pride of the Gladstone Area Water Board.

We've all been for a barbecue at the dam, sunk a few coldies, and enjoyed a dip or a paddle in her serene waters.

But that serenity was shattered on Saturday as the Gladstone region had the chance to experience the thrill of our very own adventure race, set in the rugged surrounds of Lake Awoonga.

More than 100 adventure racers grabbed their bikes and dusted off their shoes to compete in the Lake Awoonga Adventure Race 2020.

These adrenaline-pumping, multi-disciplinary races are held outdoors on unstructured tracks through the wilderness.

A classic adventure race involves competitors changing between mountain biking, trail running and kayaking - kind of like a 'bush triathlon'. The Lake Awoonga Adventure Race is exactly that, with both novice and competitive events being held on the day.

The competitive race, which is for over 16-year-olds, is a challenging 7.4-kilometre bike ride, 2.8km trail run, 1km kayak or 500-metre swim, 2.8km trail run and 1.25km bike ride to the finish.

There were competitors from age 11, while Bryan Horton took on the gruelling challenge this year and, at 71, is an inspiration to all. He is looking forward to next year's event and will strive to better this year's race time.

The novice race (run as teams of two for 10 years plus) consists of a more leisurely 1.25km bike ride, 1.3km kayak, 2.8km trail run and 1.25km bike ride to the finish.

Both races offered those involved a great opportunity to compete with a teammate, battle it out against other teams, or just challenge themselves in the great outdoors.

This unique event is proudly hosted by the Benaraby Progress Association. For over 65 years, the progress association has held regular Friday night dances at the local hall, and these dances are still popular today but some newbies are on the scene and they can't dance!

But they can run and they can ride, and they love our dam, so they hatched a plan. Everybody loves a great adventure, and Benaraby has got the perfect spot for it. Anybody wishing to join the team to help bring new and exciting events to the region would be greatly welcome.

This year brought some challenges and, up until mid-August, organisers were unsure if we could make it happen.

But with the amazing support of event partner Gladstone Area Water Board, they were able to bring this unique event to the community for the second year running.

They were also supported by the Gladstone Regional Council's Ignite Events Funding. The continued support from the volunteers is how they can bring these events to the community, and it would not have been possible without them.

If the thrill of the race isn't enough, the whopping great multi-prize draw for competitors featured over $5000 in prizes. Thanks to the generosity of local businesses and supporters, the competitors had a one-in-four chance of winning a prize.

Mark your calendars - 23 October, 2021 is when the Lake Awoonga Adventure Race returns once again.

Organisers are just so excited about how they can build this event to be bigger and better next year.
