Amber's success is very sweet

Commie's Cupcakes owner Amber Comadira-Smith fell in love with cake decorating after watching the Great Australian Bake Off.

Now, she uses her graphic design skills to produce award-winning edible cake art.

"I had never touched fondant or buttercream in my life but all I could talk about was all of these amazing cakes I was going to make," she said.

"My husband suggested I try decorating a cake to see if it was something I would actually enjoy before diving in."

Ms Comadira-Smith said she attended her first cake class about a month later and it completely cemented her obsession.

"My business has given me the opportunity to combine my two loves and came up with something a bit different and unique," she said.

"What started out as escapism, turned into a fully fledged cake decorating business where I was getting referrals from people within the community.

"It was amazing."

The talented entrepreneur is a finalist for the Australian Cake Decorating Network (ACDN) Cake Decorating and Baking Industry Awards.

Industry thriving

By Jackie Dobson

Seventy-five Gladstone region businesses and organisations have reported returning to pre-Covid levels of trading.

Gladstone Chamber of Commerce and Industry judge Joe Smith said many businesses told him they were performing better than before Covid restrictions were put in place.

"This is really encouraging for the Gladstone region," he said.

"Obviously, there are some industries that have been more affected than others, but quite a lot of businesses have returned to normal."

Mr Smith said there are a few things that led to that.

"Gladstone has quite a number of large industries operating in the area and most of those guys have managed to keep their operations running pretty close to normal," he said.

"What comes of that is the small engineering and manufacturing businesses actually get quite a bit of work from the larger industries as well so that has a flow on effect.

"Gladstone's property market is also going quite well, houses haven't been staying on the market very long, they have been selling quite quickly.

"All of that works together to show that Gladstone has performed quite well over the past six or eight months."

Anything relating to tourism has suffered a drop.

"Tourism is doing it really tough because they've missed out on international travel, but local tourism businesses had little bit of help due to travel restrictions," he said.

"Retail businesses are finding it a little tough, but they already were finding it a little tough before Covid. I think this is a global issue, not so much a local issue."

Mr Smith said if Queensland don't have any more restrictions put in place and things continue to go to plan, the Gladstone region has quite a positive outlook for next year.

The success of Gladstone regional businesses were celebrated at the 2020 CGGI Annual Gala Dinner on Saturday, 7 November.

Launching the Regional Medical Pathway are, from left, Professor Geoff McColl (UQ), Debbie Carroll (Wide Bay Hospital and Health Service), Steve Williamson (CQ Hospital and Health Service), Dr Jillann Farmer (Queensland Health) and Professor Nick Klomp (CQU).

Doctor path

By Matthew Pearce

An Australian-first university and hospital partnership will see local doctors trained in their own backyard for the first time.

Under the new Regional Medical Pathway, formalised last week between CQUniversity, The University of Queensland and the Central Queensland and Wide Bay Hospital and Health Services, up to 40 doctors will receive training in regional Queensland each year.

The Central Queensland and Wide Bay regions will receive their first student intake in 2022.

Member for Gladstone Glenn Butcher said the partnership was a great opportunity to retain regionally based students where shortages already exist and offer them a medical future within their own region.

“The partnership through Regional Medical Pathways will allow for our school leavers to train within their own communities without having to go further afield to train in large cities like Brisbane and Melbourne,” he said.

“This full medical program model will provide a future workforce to our hospitals and general practice surgeries helping address the retention issues in regional areas by focussing on locals to provide a stable and self-motivated workforce supporting their own communities.”

Central Queensland Hospital and Health Service chief executive Steve Williamson said the partnership meant regional communities could be confident future health workforces would be better equipped to deal with community growth and changing healthcare needs.

“The Central Queensland and Wide Bay regions are growing areas and the communities have an expectation that healthcare delivery will meet future demand,” Mr Williamson said.

“The Regional Medical Pathway has been specifically designed to secure long-term, locally trained workforces for the regions.”

The Hospital and Health Services will provide student placements, internship opportunities and postgraduate training places at major hospitals in Gladstone, Rockhampton and Emerald (CQHHS) and Bundaberg, Hervey Bay and Maryborough (WBHHS) as well as rural hospitals and multipurpose health services.

Students will complete a three-year Bachelor of Medical Science (Pathway to Medicine) course with CQUniversity, before moving into UQ’s four-year MD program - both offered in the local area.

CQUniversity Vice-Chancellor Nick Klomp said the formalisation of the partnership was a significant milestone for regional healthcare delivery.

“CQUniversity exists to meet the education, training, and research needs of the communities we serve,” he said.

UQ Vice-Chancellor and President Professor Deborah Terry said the pathway would help address the difficulties in attracting and retaining doctors in regional, remote and rural areas.

“Medical workforce shortages exist in regional areas across Australia and around the globe and I am confident that together we can achieve a positive, sustained improvement in health outcomes in Central Queensland and Wide Bay,” Professor Terry said.

“The regional delivery of the UQ MD program will build on our current Rural Clinical School footprint in Rockhampton, Bundaberg and Hervey Bay, as well as smaller rural hospitals and general practices in the regions.”

The first intake of students to the CQUniversity Bachelor of Medical Science (Pathway to Medicine) course will commence in Term 1, 2022, with students progressing to the UQ MD program from 2025.

Applications for entry into the CQUniversity Bachelor of Medical Science (Pathway to Medicine) course will open in 2021.

It’s impressive that despite having a smaller population than many massive regions such as Greater Brisbane, the Sunshine Coast and the Gold Coast, our sports teams and individuals compete at such a high standard.

Just in Rugby League alone, the Central Queensland region has produced iconic players like Gladstone’s Gary Larson and fresh new faces like Cameron Munster.

And Central Queensland is still developing young talent rising through the ranks like Harry Grant, who won Dally M Rookie of the Year.

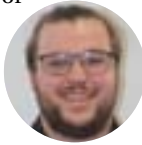

Grant played his junior rugby league in Yeppoon for the Seagulls and has now been discovered as one of the fastest rising talents in the NRL, arguably just missing a spot in the Queensland representative side.

And if we look at the women’s State of Origin contest last Friday night we can see that the Rugby League core of Central Queensland runs deep into the game.

We had a coach, a referee and a player all represent Central Queensland on one of the biggest stages of NRL.

We should be so proud that our sporting culture has produced such sublime talents across a range of different sports and with further development to our sporting clubs, the only way is up.

Rookwood Weir welcomed

By Matthew Pearce

Regional leaders have welcomed progress on the $352.2 million Rookwood Weir project following the signing of a government co-funding agreement last week.

The federal government has agreed to invest $176.1 million towards building the weir which will provide about 200 jobs during construction, increase water security and expand irrigated agricultural production in the Lower Fitzroy River region.

Major construction works are expected to start in 2021 on the weir, with early works on track to start this month.

Gladstone Mayor Matt Burnett said while the harbour city had a safe and reliable water supply at Lake Awoonga, the weir would provide water security for all of Central Queensland.

"Water is what builds communities. Having that huge water security right nearby is good for us, but it's also good for our neighbours - it's good for the Central Highlands, it's good for Rockhampton, Livingstone and even Woorabinda. All of CQ will see the benefits from this," he said.

"Also, we've obviously we've got major industry here that uses a lot of water and if we don't get a wet season and the dam levels go down that puts a huge impact on the production of aluminium and aluminium from Gladstone."

Mr Burnett said the Gladstone Regional Council had always supported the Rookwood Weir provided ratepayers didn't shoulder all the costs.

"It needs to be funded by the state and federal governments, which it now has been, and the ongoing costs need to be funded by the users of the facility," he said.

He also called for the construction of the Gladstone-Fitzroy Pipeline as part of the project.

"The Rookwood Weir project for us standing alone doesn't provide water security until you connect the Gladstone-Fitzroy Pipeline, which has been designed and I think part of the project for me needs to be building that pipeline," he said.

The proposed 115 kilometre pipeline would enable the transfer of 30,000 megalitres of water per annum from the lower Fitzroy River to Gladstone.

Mr Burnett said it the project would directly benefit employment in the harbour city, with Gladstone business McCosker Contracting awarded one of the major contracts to deliver the weir.

"We have a strong construction workforce in Gladstone, we built three LNG plants, two alumina refineries, smelters and cement plants, so building a Rookwood Weir won't be hard," he said.

"Even more exciting for Central Queensland is the fact that Member for Gladstone Glenn Butcher has just been named the Minister for Water."

Livingstone Shire Mayor Andy Ireland said when it came to the weir CQ councils needed to think regionally rather than focusing on their 'own patch' entirely.

"Rookwood Weir is something we should all be supporting due to the water security it brings to the region as a whole," he said.

Deputy Mayor Adam Belot said additional water storage capacity was critical to the prosperity of our entire region, especially with an increasing population and potentially dryer conditions.

Capricorn Enterprise regional economic development manager Neil Lethlean said he was looking forward to the Central Queensland region furthering its agricultural industry position as a major 'food bowl'.

"The construction of Rookwood Weir will provide significant benefits for the area through the construction and operational phases via employment and when operational by providing water security to Gladstone," he said.

"I'd encourage our local businesses to sign up at the project's ICN supplier portal to guarantee your capability details are considered for this landmark project."

A special day to celebrate the work of celebrants

By Matthew Pearce

Celebrants are used to officiating other people's celebrations, but now a special day has been launched to celebrate them.

An initiative of the Australian Federation of Civil Celebrants, the aim of National Celebrants Day on Friday, 20 November, is to celebrate celebrants and raise awareness of what they do.

Celebrant Roxanne Hodda said she loved providing a service to the Central Queensland community - and even further afield.

"Pre-Covid times I had travelled across three states performing beautiful weddings that I had handwritten in conjunction with the couple," she said.

"Sometimes I am lucky and get to marry family and friends and this makes it even more special, many of my couples become friends."

She said Covid-19 had put a strain on celebrants, just as it had other businesses, but next year looked to be a busy one.

"Many of our couples postponed their wedding days and so 2021 is shaping up to be a hectic year, there are very few vacancies left in my calendar."

Ms Hodda said Central Queensland was lucky to have a "wonderful group of celebrants" servicing the area.

"Our local celebrant group are committed to supporting each other and sharing ideas, brainstorming, that kind of thing."

"I've also had the privilege of working with most of our local vendors - venues, florists and photographers and more."

Australian Federation of Civil Celebrants national president Anthony Burke while people had a simple view of a celebrant as "someone who turns up at a funeral and speaks at a wedding or funeral", the truth was more complicated.

"As celebrants, we are able to tailor a ceremony to the client's needs on most occasions. Whether it be a small or large ceremony, the same amount of work and attention to detail is required," he said.

"We offer a professional service, we support couples and families, we bring joy and comfort to others and we offer a personal and memorable service."

"For weddings, it is much more than just the above. We are legally responsible for ensuring a marriage is valid and conducted lawfully."

According to the Australian Bureau of Statistics, almost 80 per cent of all marriages in Australia are solemnised by celebrants, with the proportion increasing every year.

Hooper our mayor: Doblo

By Matthew Pearce

Rockhampton business owner and former mayoral candidate Dominic Doblo says if he was in Chris Hooper's position he'd be at Rockhampton City Hall tomorrow to take up the top job.

Rockhampton Mayor Margaret Strelow resigned on Monday 9 October after a tribunal found she had engaged in misconduct by failing to update her register of interests to include hospitality received from mining company Adani, now Bravus. She has refuted the finding.

Under new local government rules, the mayoralty would have passed to local identity Chris Hooper, the only other candidate from the March election.

But the next day, Local Government Minister Stirling Hinchliffe said the state government would introduce and pass a bill allowing mayoral or councillor positions to be filled through a by-election.

"Under the present law, which the state government changed because they didn't like Margaret Strelow, Chris 'Pineapple' Hooper is entitled to be mayor," Mr Doblo said.

"And they can't keep changing the law because they don't like someone."

Mr Doblo said the majority of people who come into his fruit shop agreed with him that the law shouldn't be changed.

"People are a bit worried about Chris's appearance but he's an intelligent bloke and he wouldn't run the council by himself, the rest of the council is there to support him, as well as the CEO."

Mr Doblo said if Chris Hooper was given the job as mayor, he wanted a job on the council's promotions committee to help promote the Rockhampton region across Australia.

"We would get enormous publicity with Pineapple Hooper as our mayor. We've got to turn this situation into a positive and promote Rocky."

Member for Capricornia Michelle Landry agreed that if the law said Chris Hooper was to be the next mayor of Rockhampton Regional Council, then he was entitled to be mayor.

"The Queensland government can't just choose to ignore a law or choose to not enforce a law if they don't agree with it, even if they were the ones to change it in the first place," she said.

"The policy has always been short-sighted. It was passed by the Queensland government to prevent people like Margaret Strelow from challenging sitting state Labor members. It is up to the local state government members to explain why they supported it in the first place."

Member for Rockhampton Barry O'Rourke said once the new state parliament was sworn in, the government would introduce and pass a bill to retrospectively amend the Local Government Act.

"This is not a matter of changing a law because someone is not liked," he said.

"Margaret Strelow chose to resign as Mayor of Rockhampton Regional Council and she has placed the community in limbo because of her selfishness.

"This is about communities making a choice so that they can have a proper vote to determine the best candidate to fill the role."

Ms Strelow has asked for privacy following her decision to resign.

Gladstone artist produces award-winning cake art

By Jackie Dobson

Commie's Cupcakes owner Amber Comadira-Smith uses her graphic design skills to produce award-winning edible cake art.

The talented entrepreneur is a finalist for the Australian Cake Decorating Network (ACDN) Cake Decorating and Baking Industry Awards.

"I was nominated under two different categories, the Teacher of the Year Award and the Cake Mate Award - it is kind of like the Academy Awards, but for cakes.

"The Cake Mate Award recognises friendships within the cake industry and how you've helped people within the cake industry.

"They told me last week that I was a top four finalist which is absolutely amazing."

Ms Comadira-Smith said it's wonderful recognition for her business which has evolved over a period of time.

"I originally started as a graphic designer," Ms Comadira-Smith said.

"I was a graphic designer in my early 20s and I loved it, I loved the creative challenges that came with graphic design.

"Growing up I enjoyed art subjects at school, I studied the diploma and I landed a junior graphic design position.

"I couldn't believe I had actually found a job that wanted me to use my creativity and I was really good at it.

"I thought I would be a graphic designer for the rest of my life, I liked creating logos and marketing collateral for businesses.

"I also enjoyed engaging with businesses, and seeing them thrive and grow from my designs, it was amazing.

"A few short years later I felt completely stunted and unfulfilled in my work and started going through a low moment.

"Typically my clients started to have a tighter rein, became more controlling, and as a result, my work started to suffer.

"When you start producing bad stuff you begin to feel poor about yourself so that's when I realised I needed to find a new creative outlet," she said.

Ms Comadira-Smith said it was around that time the Great Australian Bake Off aired in Australia and she became instantly obsessed with cake decorating overnight.

"I had never touched fondant or buttercream in my life but all I could talk about was all of these amazing cakes I was going to make.

"My husband suggested I try decorating a cake to see if it was something I would actually enjoy before diving in."

Ms Comadira-Smith said she attended her first cake class about a month later and it completely cemented her obsession.

"My business has given me the opportunity to combine my two loves and came up with something a bit different and unique," she said.

"What started out as escapism, turned into a fully fledged cake decorating business where I was getting referrals from people within the community.

"It was amazing."

Ms Comadira-Smith has since stopped making cakes and has redirected her focus to teaching as that is where her passion now lies.

"I have a dedicated teaching space in my home where I host beginner and advanced classes. I also offer classes online," she said.

The talented teacher will find out if she is the winner of the Cake Mate Award at the Online Industry Awards Night on 5 December.

GKI commitment stands

By Jackie Dobson

Altum Property Group's commitment to Great Keppel Island's revitalisation project has not wavered, despite the investor missing the lease purchase deadline on 31 October.

Altum Property Group Director Rob McCreedy said they were hoping to finalise the sale with Tower Holdings Pty Ltd prior to the state election, but unfortunately that didn't happen.

"The original sale agreement between Tower and Altum was signed on 17 September 2019 and varied twice earlier this year," Mr McCreedy said.

"We had no idea then, that the contract would still be dragging out until after the 2020 election."

Mr McCreedy said the delays in transfer of the lease have been entirely due to the state government.

"On 27 February Altum signed a revised agreement with Tower which gave Altum an additional due diligence period until 30 April, a settlement date of 30 August and the option of extending for a further two months if the state government had not yet finalised the lease conditions.

"On 30 April, we concluded our due diligence, effectively making the sale agreement unconditional. This was following advice from the State Government that there would be significant additional funding coming for Common User Infrastructure," he said.

Altum Property Group's commitment to Great Keppel Island's revitalisation project has not wavered, despite the investor missing the lease purchase deadline on 31 October.

"On 30 August, the lease conditions and support for public infrastructure were still not finalised, and the department encouraged us to extend the contract settlement date to give them more time, following a crisis meeting with Tourism Minister Kate Jones.

"We reluctantly exercised the option to extend for a further two months, taking us to 30 October, one day prior to the election." Mr McCreedy said that despite their pleas, 14 months of negotiations, hundreds of thousands of dollars invested and ample community goodwill to start the redevelopment project, no agreement to transfer the leases had been signed.

"Regrettably, in the last six months we have faced constant broken promises about when documentation will be finalised and what support GKI will receive from the state government to build the massive amounts of public infrastructure up-front.

"No small or medium sized business could spend nearly two years sitting around and talking about processes like we have," he said.

Going into the election, the Labor government announced $30 million for a list of works for the island including a breakwall that would facilitate an all weather, equitable access for everyone and reduce erosion on Putney Beach.

"The state government's announcement required a restructure of the funding we had been negotiating to commence the project," Mr McCreedy said.

"We are currently finalising the alternative funding strategy and hope to table this with the current member and ministers as soon as they are announced.

"We are confident the state government will transfer the leases once the new ministers are in place."

First Lego League event at CQUniversity Gladstone

Central Queensland students put their design and coding skills to the test as CQUniversity Gladstone hosted the annual First Lego League (FLL) tournament.

The energetic and exciting science, technology, engineering and maths (STEM) challenge is part of a global competition for primary and secondary students, with 11 schools represented in Central Queensland.

Organiser and Gladstone West State School deputy principal Sarah Jacob said 140 students were excited to show off their skills at the Gladstone event on 31 October.

"Our FLL event is always a highlight in the STEM calendar for our region's primary and secondary schools, this year more than ever," she said.

"Adhering to our Covid-safe plans, we were able to bring kids together from as far away as Emerald, to compete, challenge themselves and have fun at our Gladstone Regional Tournament."

The event challenged teams to solve scientific challenges, and code Lego robots to complete missions around a game table.

The Champion's Award was won by Chanel College's Chanel Crocs, who will proceed to the state competition in Brisbane in December, along with Gladstone State High School's Rekin Sharks and Calliope State

Country music rocks GKI

Country music floated on the Capricorn Coast breeze as Country on Keppel kicked off on Friday, 13 November - one of Australia's first music festivals following the Covid-19 shutdown of the music industry.

The second annual event, which concluded on Sunday, doubled its 2019 patronage, in a year marred by festival cancellations.

Country on Keppel featured an all-Queensland line-up starring James Blundell and Matt Cornell, with Caitlyn Shadbolt, Brad Butcher, SaltbushSix, Jade Holland, Tony Cook, Anna Farquhar, and Louise James FX.

Great Keppel Island Hideaway hosted the festival in July 2019, but this year's festival was postponed to November due to Covid-19 restrictions on gatherings. The event is slated to return to July 16-18 in 2021.

Festival organiser Peter Blundell hailed the 2020 festival a "major success" against all odds.

"Although there was a lot of uncertainty this year due to Covid-19 restrictions and border closures, the 2020 Country on Keppel festival doubled its numbers from last year, with just over 400 music fans joining us at Great Keppel Island Hideaway," he said.

"There aren't a lot of other country festivals held on an island and the relaxed atmosphere of the festival means fans have access to the artists and everyone is here to mingle and have a fun weekend.

"Country on Keppel 2020 also demonstrated that festivals can proceed, with Covid-safe regulations in place."

The artists also enjoyed the chilled atmosphere that the island festival served up.

"Country on Keppel was such an amazing experience - one the most laidback and enjoyable festivals I've ever done," Matt Cornell said.

The inaugural Green Brothers Country on Keppel Talent Search opened proceedings on Friday night, with Matthew Munro, Keely Sliwka, Bella Mackenzie, Rae Leigh, and Mitch Rolfe vying for the title.

Mackay singer-songwriter Bella Mackenzie, who is 15 years old, took home a new Takamine guitar and road case and opened Saturday's festival line-up, as the winner.

The judging panel of country artists James Blundell and Matt Cornell, with country music journalist and publicist Bec Gracie, had the tough job of narrowing the strong field down to just one winner.

Bella said it was exciting performing in front of judges of the calibre of James Blundell and Matt Cornell, and was over the moon to be named the inaugural winner.

"Seeing all the people who just love country music like me, it was really cool to play to them," she said.

"Country on Keppel is such a chilled vibe. All the artists are really supportive of each other. The festival is the best of both worlds with country and the beach.

"If anyone was thinking of coming to the festival or doing the talent quest, definitely do it - it opens up so many opportunities and it's lots of fun to get to know the other people in the industry and learn from them as they perform."

Keagan gets the top gong

The next generation of tradespeople at Gladstone Ports Corporation have taken home an award at the annual GPC Apprentice and Trainee Awards night, with mechanical apprentice Keagan Yasso receiving the top gong.

There were 18 winners at the 14th annual event, but the spotlight was on Mr Yasso who won the title of Apprentice of the Year.

The fourth-year apprentice said it was an honour to receive GPC's highest apprentice and trainee award.

"It's all thanks to my family, friends and mentors at GPC who inspire, teach and support me every day," he said.

"I'm really passionate about what I do and this award is motivation to keep learning and being the best I can be."

GPC is home to 63 apprentices and trainees and 17 will graduate from its training program in December.

Acting CEO Craig Walker said GPC was proud to be training the next generation of Gladstone's tradespeople, with the awards ceremony recognising the hard work, skills and dedication of all apprentices at the port.

"We are harnessing our local talent because they are our future tradespeople who will go on to build our nation's future and be well placed in the tradition of apprenticeships and traineeships, to train and support our next generation of aspiring people," Mr Walker said.

"We're very fortunate at the port to have and maintain such a large number of apprentices when this is not the trend across the nation and we're committed to helping them on their journey."

"We have employees with over 40 years of invaluable knowledge and wisdom mentoring our apprentices and trainees and that is a very valuable characteristic we are very proud of."

Livingstone competition to light up Christmas

Livingstone Shire Council's first Christmas lights competition has been launched in an effort to unite the community and boost morale at the end of a challenging year.

Councillor Tanya Lynch said 'Light Up Livingstone' for the festive season was introduced by council to help lift community spirits.

"This initiative is all about supporting our community which like many, has experienced challenges due to the global pandemic of Covid-19," Cr Lynch said.

"It's a great way to foster community spirit and bring us all together."

"If you love Christmas and putting up light displays, this is the perfect opportunity to get involved and spread some Christmas cheer in your neighbourhood."

Council has created two competition categories; one for businesses and one for residents.

Entries will be judged on:

- Lighting display- Use of colour

- Interactive elements- Innovative concepts and

The prizes for the business competition are long lunches for colleagues and ferry transfers, thanks to the support of Great Keppel Island Hideaway and Keppel Konnections.

First prize for the resident lights competition is a weekend at Great Keppel Island Hideaway for two adults and two children including meals and ferry transfers.

There are also gift cards up for grabs.

Between the AFL grand final, a Gladstone concert and a new album, it's been a busy few months for Sheppard.

Sheppard's fairytale life

By Matthew Pearce

For George Sheppard, from the Brisbane indie pop band Sheppard, his “amazing gig” at the AFL grand final still feels like a dream.

“I look back at it and I just have to pinch myself, it was just the most incredible experience, being on stage just flew by for us,” he said.

“We had an amazing time and it was so nice to get out there and perform a real show to real people after all this time.”

George said the grand final was the band's biggest ever gig, with 30,000 people in the stands and millions more watching around the world.

“The last show that we performed at live was back in February, just before the lockdown in Adelaide,” he said.

“We’ve done livestream shows here and there but this was the first time we’d been able to actually perform to a real crowd for months and it was 30,000 people. We went from zero to the biggest gig of our lives.”

Next, the Sheppard siblings head to Gladstone's Blain Park on 20-21 November as the headline act of Air Beats, an open-air concert presented by Gladstone Regional Council.

With purpose built ‘beat boxes’ keeping groups socially distant from other attendees, George said it would be another unique event for the band.

“We’ve played in Gladstone before, on the tour for our second album, and had a great time,” he said.

“We didn’t get to see much of Gladstone then but the crowd was one of the most energetic we’ve had around Australia so we’re very much looking forward to coming back and performing another show for them.”

Sheppard's third album, Kaleidoscope Eyes, will be released on 26 February and George says it's his favourite album they've done so far.

“We’ve been doing one single a month this year and have actually been able to spend the majority of the year focused on the album with no distractions from gigs,” he said.

George said the whole album had been recorded at the band's family home and produced mostly by themselves.

“Band member Jason Bovino is a producer and because we had the studio at home it was just a really creatively freeing experience for us,” he said.

“The songs that are on this album I think are among the best we’ve ever written and I really want to get it out there and have people hear it.”

While next year's plans are still up in the air due to “old mate Covid”, George said he hoped there would be a national tour in support of the album.

One the family front, sister Amy is getting married after being proposed to by her long-time partner Lachlan Stuart.

Joining Sheppard at Air Beats will be Hayley Marsten, Chris Bax Trio, Jason O’Hara, Nathan Bedford, Jack & Jacinta, Smiley n Wayno Duo, Thomo and Wal Duo and Chris Schofield.

Tickets for the event are available at <https://gladstoneentertainment.com/>

Win a ham voucher

CQ Today is teaming up with Barney Point Butchery, giving you the chance to win one of 20 $50 Christmas ham vouchers.

Butcher Brendan Sutcliffe said the business, which relocated from Barney Street to Young Street in 2009 and employs a dozen staff, was a favourite with the Gladstone community.

"People know what they can expect from us, which is high quality meat at a good price," he said.

"I'd invite anyone to compare our prices and quality to any other butcher shop or supermarket in town."

The business usually does a roaring trade around Christmas, with their smoked hams, turkeys and barbecued meats popular.

Starting this week, simply purchase a copy of CQ Today from your local newsagent, complete the entry form and drop it into the entry box at Barney Point Butchery, 31 Young Street, Gladstone.

Entries will close 5pm, Thursday, 10 December.

Anglicare, City Centre Plaza unite for Christmas

It's the festive season and the City Centre Plaza in Rockhampton and Anglicare are driving home the Christmas spirit.

The Rockhampton community have been invited to provide some hope and joy to families in need this Christmas by donating non-perishable food items to be included in hampers.

Each Christmas, in partnership with local churches and community organisations, Anglicare Central Queensland has coordinated and delivered hundreds of Christmas hampers to those families and individuals in need.

This has also included ensuring children and young people spending their Christmas in foster, kinship or residential care have presents under the tree like every child should.

Anglicare director Clyde Wode said this year's drive is as important as any.

"Last year we made 286 hampers, 86 of those were through adopt-a-family and the other 200 we bought from the Christmas wrapping money we build," he said.

"They're full of Christmas cakes, cereals, tin ham, long life milk, baked beans and anything Christmas related.

"These drives are great for us because it allows us to add extra things to put in to make better hampers.

"People can come in and just donate a few items and there's already a lot in there which is great.

"Last year we emptied the containers four times.

"The hampers are distributed on 14 December."

City Centre Plaza Centre Manager Victoria Haworth feel that Christmas should be a celebration for everyone with presents under the tree and dinner on the table.

"We hope that the donated food goes a small way towards assisting families who find themselves in challenging situations," she said.

"We are always proud of how the Rockhampton community steps in and helps out when called upon and City Centre Plaza is thrilled to offer a location point for donations.

"By purchasing extra items in your weekly shop, you can make a big difference to someone's Christmas."

The food drive will continue until Christmas Eve with all donations welcome to be placed in the cage outside of Coles.

Volunteers from Anglicare Central Queensland have also commenced gift wrapping in the centre.

Mayor's Carols by Candlelight charity nominated

Girls Time Out Young Women's Support Service has been selected to receive public donations and ticket proceeds from the 2020 Mayor's Carols by Candlelight.

Girls Time Out is a local organisation committed to responding to the needs of young mothers / women aged 12 to 25 years in the Rockhampton community by providing support for their growth and human potential.

for young women by providing effective and life changing support in four areas: positive peer supports, positive relationships, positive conversations and positive creative art.

"The Rockhampton region community has a great tradition of helping others, not only at Christmas but at any time people are in need. I am very pleased that this year we will be able to assist Girls Time Out and their Me Myself and I program," Acting Mayor Neil Fisher said.

"I understand that this program is not funded by any other source so it relies 100 per cent on donations.

"I know times are tough for many people right now, but I do urge audience members to give what they can to Girls Time Out at this year's Mayor's Carols by Candlelight concerts."

The Mayor's Carols by Candlelight is a Rockhampton Regional Council event supported by WIN Television, Triple M, CQ Today and other local businesses.

Mumma's gets makeover

By Matthew Pearce

It's been a busy year for Mumma's Fish & Chips owners Michele and Tony Waine, but they wouldn't have it any other way.

Previously known as Gladstone Road Seafood, the business at 62 Gladstone Rd, Rockhampton, has had a makeover, complete with a new paint job, new fryers, new fresh produce and a new lawn seating area.

"We rebranded it as Mumma's when we bought the business because that's what they call me at home. I wanted to call it Tony's but he didn't like that," Michele said.

"We often get asked who Mumma is and I put my hand up, they probably expect someone a bit older."

Before taking on the business 14 months ago, Tony was in concreting for 20 years and Michele was in retail, although they both had a hospitality background from their younger days.

"At the end of the day it's all the same thing, dealing with customers and keeping people happy," Michele said.

"We were lucky, we started out gradually, people came in slowly and we're getting better at cooking for the masses."

The Waines believe in using only the freshest produce, sourcing seafood from the Brisbane to Mackay area.

"We don't have the standard old red emperor that's imported from overseas or the frozen fillets that have been in the freezer for the past four or six years," Michele said.

"We always have a mackerel as our background fish, most Rockhampton people love the mackerel, but we try to mix it up with the more premium fish like coral trout, snapper and reef fish."

Michele said while it took a lot of effort, sourcing Queensland fish was worth it.

"We're just about to get a local red emperor fish which is really good because most of Rockhampton's red emperor comes from China," she said.

Mumma's Fish & Chips owners Michele and Tony Waine are growing the business.

"We've also secured prawns for Christmas, which was a challenge because prawn trawlers tend to move toward scalloping this time of year.

"We'll be taking orders for prawns from mid-December at our regular price, not an inflated price."

The Waines believe in giving back to the community, whether it's through fundraising or donating meals to people on the Covid frontline.

"Because we've been locals for more than 20 years, the money's not going anywhere else," Michele said.

"We're still a little shop but after 14 months people are starting to recognise who we are."

Dancers to hit the stage

By Matthew Pearce

It's been a year of uncertainty for Rockhampton's Dance Star Studio but the eager dancers are about to hit the stage again at last.

Principal Natasha Williams said Covid-19 had thrown a spanner in the works of the studio's 2020 plans, but the end of the year concerts on Sunday, 22 November, would make it all worth it.

"At one stage we didn't know if it was going to be possible, but we've been able to make it work by splitting the concert into two because of Covid restrictions," she said.

"This is the first time the kids have been able to perform this year and they're looking forward to dancing on the stage in front of a live audience."

Because of Covid-19, the studio missed out on attending the Rockhampton Eisteddfod for the first time and students' exams had to be done via video.

"We even did Zoom classes online for a while when we couldn't have classes at the studio," Ms Williams said.

"We've been able to keep going, but in different ways, changing as the restrictions did just like everyone else."

The theme of the concert this year is 'Around the World'.

"No-one's been able to travel this year so we thought we'd bring the world to Rockhampton in dance," Ms Williams said.

"It's been a bit of fun and a bit of a geography lesson for the kids as well."

Students of all ages will perform on stage, from two-year-old Tiny Tots to adults, covering genres like Jazz, Tap, Ballet, Contemporary, Song and Dance, Musical Theatre, Cabaret, Hip Hop and Acro Dance.

The junior concert will be held at 11am at Pilbeam Theatre and the senior concert will follow at 2.30pm.

Tickets are available from Pilbeam Theatre box office or online.

Students from Dance Star Studio are ready to perform in concert.

Junior and beginner contemporary students' dance number is What a Wonderful World.

Intermediate and junior cabaret students will perform Copacabana from Brazil.

Senior ballet students perform the Chinese Fan Dance.

A purr-fect career change

By Matthew Pearce

Feline fancier Tracey Austin was a police officer for 15 years before leaving to take up a very different vocation - running a cat-themed gift store.

The Cat's Meow Gifts opened in late August at Shop 1/68 Denham Street, Rockhampton and has already been embraced by shoppers.

"After 15 years of doing my last job, I just woke up one day and went, no, it's time to move on and do something else in life," Ms Austin said.

"Before I was a police officer, I was actually a hairdresser, although I only did that because the police had a height restriction when I left high school."

Tracey said running the shop had been a lot of fun, as well as a massive learning curve as she came to grips with retail and the power of social media.

But she wouldn't trade the past couple of months for anything.

"Because retail is new to me I just wanted to ease into it and go at my own pace," she said.

"My husband Richard and I thought of this idea back at the end of January, early February when Covid was only a Wuhan problem, then all of a sudden Italy was severely impacted and then it was everywhere.

"By then my resignation was already well into play, I could have withdrawn it but I thought, you've got to get on with life, you can't sit back and not chase a dream."

She said cats were her "absolute passion".

"They are actually very intelligent creatures. They can be complacent at times, but they are also very loyal," she said.

"I like that they don't need constant attention, they have their independence and a non-chalant air about them."

Ms Austin has 10 cats at home, including two sets of siblings, with ages ranging from two-and-a-half to 12.

"Each one has their own little personality, they're so individualistic and so comical. I just love watching them. I can come home and I'll have two or three meowing for me to come in."

Tracey Austin has channeled her love of cats into a cat-themed gift store, The Cat's Meow.

The Cat's Meow carries a wide range of items, from homewares and accessories to toys, clothing, wall art, bags and purses, crockery, jewellery, coasters, calendars, umbrellas, doormats and more.

"We have little picture frames that people can put a photo of their own cat in, glasses with Egyptian design, beautiful Japanese style bowls and some hard carved coathangers."

The store sources products from all over Australia and the world.

"The Japanese and South Koreans make very good quality stationary and I've made contact with a Russian girl who's making some unique greeting cards," Ms Austin said.

"I'm also in talks with a business in Melbourne about getting some cat-themed wrapping paper and there's a company in NSW that has great homewares and cushions."

While admitting the shop catered to a "niche market", she said the region had more than its fair share of feline fanatics.

"As you'd imagine, we frequent Petbarn a lot and one of the managers told us, there's so many people in Rockhampton that are cat mad, they will just love your shop," she said.

"And it's certainly been very well received."

Students step up to do their bit for the environment

Rockhampton Grammar School Year 10 students have stepped up to do their bit for the environment, helping Capricornia Catchments with a revegetation project near Ritamada at Emu Park last week.

Rockhampton Grammar School director of outdoor education Damien Boicos said each year The Rockhampton Grammar School Year 10 students participated in an Outdoor Adventure, Challenge, Service and Preparation programme.

"In 'normal' years, this includes overseas trips to Vietnam or New Zealand along with other activities including sailing in the Whit-sundays, hiking at Carnarvon Gorge or a canoe expedition on the Noosa River," he said.

"Each trip involves a service component back to that area's local community wherever possible. Unfortunately students were unable to complete this valued programme earlier in the year, so last week the students were building on the usual themes of the programme being Adventure, Challenge, Service, with the addition for Preparation for Year 11, but experiencing them in our own Central Queensland backyard."

Capricornia Catchments project officer Rachel said the Ritamada project involved prepping the site by removing invasive weeds, spreading a thick layer of mulch to reduce weed regrowth and planting native flora.

"It was hard work, but working as a team makes it easier, we also had a lot of support from Livingstone Shire Council," she said.

"Ritamada is situated on the coastal zone, these zones provide a lot of important ecosystem services such as storm protection, habitat/nesting for native and migratory animals, erosion and sediments control.

"It is important that we look after these environments while getting young people to participate in community service projects like this so they can see that taking care of the planet is essential to ensure its longevity."

RACQ Capricorn Rescue performed an extensive aerial search for a missing Boyne Island man.

Search for missing person

RACQ Capricorn Rescue performed an extensive aerial search from the Emu Park area to Port Alma in search of missing Boyne Island man Craig Gordon on Tuesday.

The man, aged in his 60s, had been missing for several days prior to the tasking of RACQ Capricorn Rescue.

The Rescue300 crew searched the areas along the coast, the tributaries of the Fitzroy River and Balaclava Island extensively for any sightings of Mr Gordon or his belongings.

Throughout the search, RACQ Capricorn Rescue crew members sighted the unmanned 4.6m vessel belonging to Mr Gordon at the northern end of Balaclava Island, an area known to be inhabited by crocodiles.

In addition to the vessel, Rescue300 crew members also sighted various fishing equipment, an esky, Jerry can, and lifejackets located in the mangroves.

No sightings of the missing person were reported.

Christmas cheer at Walter Reid centre

By Matthew Pearce

Reid's Gallery and Gift Shop is back for the Christmas season at Rockhampton's Walter Reid Cultural Centre.

Organiser Trish Craig said the gift shop would be open every day of the week until Christmas Eve, with arts and crafts created by the Walter Reid Cultural Centre Artists.

"Any Walter Reid tenant who has product they want to sell can put it up for sale, but they have to be prepared to do shifts at the gift shop," she said.

"We have potters, artists, embroiderers, patchworkers, people who do mosiacing and more.

"We try to make the gifts as 'Christmasy' as possible, and as affordable as possible, because a lot of people just need inexpensive gifts for, say, their neighbour or co-worker.

"We stay open until Christmas Eve because in the past we've had people rushing in at the last minute the day before Christmas who haven't bought any presents."

Community groups at the Walter Reid Cultural Centre include Capricornia Potters, Rockhampton Embroiderers' Guild, Patch-Happy Circle, CQ Contemporary Artists, Fibre Arts, Rockhampton Lapidary Club, Little Theatre and more.

Trish encouraged people to drop in to the gift shop at the corner of East and Derby streets, which she said was often forgotten by shoppers despite the quality of the work.

"We're still in the CBD, but it's a bit difficult to get people to come that extra block and a half," she said.

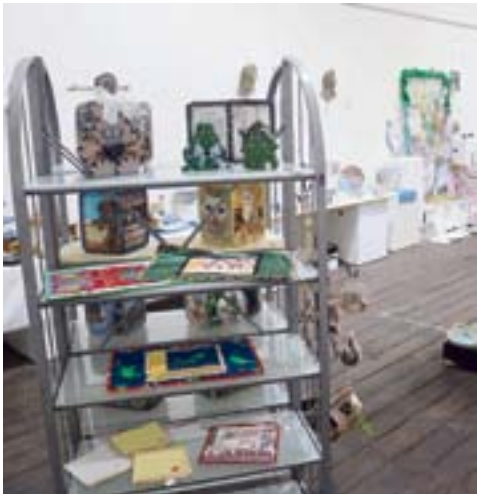

Gail Black, who has been a potter for 30 years, with some of the work of the Rockhampton Embroiderers' Guild at Reid's Gallery and Gift Shop.

The Walter Reid Cultural Centre Artists hosted a pop-up shop at the Kern Arcade earlier in the year, with $1000 being donated to charity, split between the Royal Flying Doctor Service and and Bat Care Capricornia.

The Walter Reid Cultural Centre was built in 1899. Originally used as a warehouse and a merchant store, the building was also used during the Second World War as part of the manufacturing of goods for the war effort.

The Rockhampton Regional Council now owns the building which is used by Rockhampton's artists and crafts persons.

Reid's Gallery and Gift Shop is open from 10am to 3pm, seven days a week, until Christmas Eve.

New police for Rocky

Queensland Police Service Commissioner Katarina Carroll and Police Minister Mark Ryan have congratulated 79 new officers on their graduation, with two heading to Rockhampton.

The recruits took their oath of service in the early morning light at the Oxley Academy in Brisbane, vowing to serve the Queensland community.

The graduation marks the end of a modified training program for the QPS' newest members amidst Covid-safe requirements.

The officers will now begin a 12-month station-based training program as First Year Constables (FYCs), which will take them through a range of real-world scenarios in policing.

Commissioner Carroll wished new officers well in their new careers, beginning all throughout the state.

"The role of police within our community is a unique one which requires a range of skills including empathy, communication and physical skills.

"These 79 officers have completed an intensive program to have come this far, and their training is not yet complete.

"The FYCs will be posted around the state from Ayr to Wynnum to Longreach, where they will further embed their newly-learned skills and provide a fresh perspective to their new stations."

Member for Rockhampton Barry O'Rourke offered the new officers his congratulations on behalf of the local community.

"Welcome to these new officers who will be valuable additions to the Queensland Police Service," Mr O'Rourke said.

"I am so proud that two of these new officers will go to North Rockhampton Police Station in our area."

Member for Keppel, Brittany Lauga thanked these new police officers for standing up to serve their fellow Queenslanders.

"Through the challenges these officers confront in their upcoming roles, 'honour' and 'service' will be the cornerstones of their tenure as they serve the people of Queensland," she said.

"I am proud too that the Palaszczuk government is backing Queensland Police with funding to deliver an extra 2025 police personnel.

"This is the biggest investment in policing in three decades."

Country boy Dusty makes his debut

By Matthew Pearce

If there's ever been an artist who can sing country music from experience, it's Dusty.

From growing up near Birdsville to working as a horse breaker and managing properties throughout Queensland, Dusty has well and truly served his apprenticeship.

Released at 12am Thursday, 12 November, on the iTunes Country Songs Chart, the Yepoon singer's first single, Show You Country, is already a hit with audiences.

"It's going pretty strong, there's been a lot of positive feedback on it and support from my social media platforms," he said.

The rocking country song was recorded in Queensland and mixed and mastered in the US by Mike Stankiewicz with musicians Kosta Theodosis on drums, Tim Galloway on lead guitar, and Judd Tiziani on bass playing on the track.

Dusty wrote Show You Country in about five or 10 minutes over a couple of beers.

"I was in the rodeo scene when I was a younger fella and every time a song like that would come on at the end of the night it would always pack the dance floor out," he said.

"I wanted to release something that would get everybody dancing and having some fun, especially after the year we've just had."

Dusty's been around music all his life - his dad and aunty are singers and his mum's a drummer.

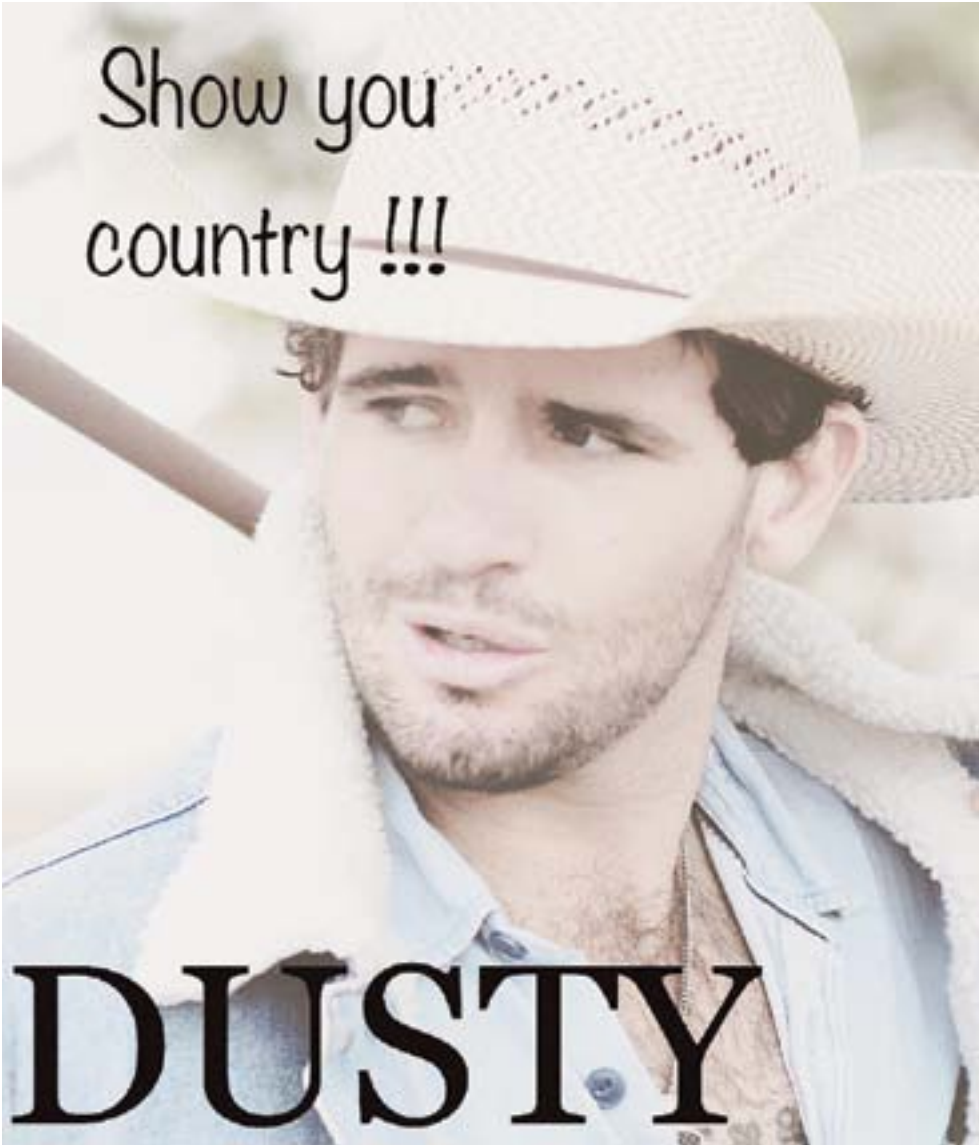

"I've lived in Broken Hill and there was no coverage out in the Simpson Desert for me to play around on phones so after work I'd just chill out and write music and play my guitar," he said.

After years of living in the bush, Dusty was eager for a new start and Central Queensland hasn't disappointed.

"I just moved to Yeppoon four weeks ago and it's beautiful up here," he said.

"It's a bit of a lifestyle change but there are a lot of country people up and around this way. It's the best of both worlds really, there's a bit of the country scene and you can go to the beach when you need a break."

The music video for Show You Country was even filmed in Rockhampton with Appleton Studios.

The cover art from Dusty's debut single, Show You Country.

"The song starts with the lyrics 'cruising in the city with my big hat on'. Rocky's not really a big city but it's big enough for me," he said.

While Covid has meant this year has been a "bit of a wipe-out" when it comes to gigs, Dusty said it had given him time to focus on his music video and he expects 2021 to be a busier year.

He said he would like to thank publicist Bec Gracie and Horseman's Way Photography for their support.

CQ leads way in road safety week

CQ motorists are urged to lead the way and drive so others survive for National Road Safety Week.

Member for Gladstone Glenn Butcher MP said the week, held from 15-22 November, gave residents the opportunity to be leaders in road safety.

"Each year, about 1200 people are killed in crashes on Australian roads, and another 44,000 are seriously injured," Mr Butcher said.

"The Palaszczuk government is delivering a record $25 billion for better roads and transport across Queensland, but we all have to remember to drive safely and avoid the fatal five.

"I'm pleased to show our support for National Road Safety Week and remind our community to take care on the roads."

Member for Keppel Brittany Lauga said more than 230 people have died on Queensland roads this year, which is 40 more than the same time last year.

In 2019 there were a total of 219 road deaths and 6944 victims hospitalised.

In Keppel during that period there were two deaths and 80 hospitalised casualties, and in Rockhampton there were three deaths and 122 hospitalisations. In Gladstone four people died locally.

"Road safety is everyone's responsibility and if we each lead the way, together we can make a difference."

National Road Safety Week was founded by Peter Frazer, president of the Safer Australian Roads and Highways Group (SARAH) Group, after his 23-year-old daughter Sarah was killed in a crash in 2012.

"Now in its eighth year, we are proud National Road Safety Week continues to grow across the country," Mr Frazer said.

"It is an important reminder every life is precious and everyone has the right to get home safe to their loved ones, every day, no exceptions."

The start of National Road Safety Week also coincides with the World Day of Remembrance for Road Traffic Victims on Sunday, 15 November.

Councillors must step up

Refusing to accept a ruling that a gift of travel is pecuniary interest is significant.

Pecuniary interest registers were a Fitzgerald Inquiry recommendation and have been religiously adhered to by all sides of politics in the Queensland Parliament.

Notable exceptions were Labor's disgraced former minister Nuttall and the LNP's Driscoll.

Both refused to accept the law applied to them, claimed innocence, in Nuttall's case expressed outrage, and were found guilty and went to jail.

So when our former mayor after having been found guilty of refusing to acknowledge a pecuniary interest resigned thereby anointing the Pineapple to replace her and claiming "principle" I had to say I've heard all this before. Mostly from Nuttall.

The reality is every other mayor who accepted the gift put it down in their pecuniary interest register.

It was no big deal, Mr Adani had every right to offer a free trip to the mayors, they were not compelled to accept it but they did and when advised it was a gift by the authorities they complied. But not Ms Strelow. She was right, every other mayor wrong and the authorities to blame.

More worryingly the Federal MP Ms Landry said the requirement was "draconian". What? No wonder the feds have dragged their feet in setting up a watchdog if that's the attitude prevailing in the LNP.

Even more concerning was the Deputy Mayor Mr Fisher's comment on the ABC that the state government should review this requirement.

So it's OK for the state politicians to be bound by laws requiring publication of gifts received but not local government ones.

His statement that city councillors are all there for the community rings hollow given recent jailing and other charges/scandals surrounding some local councils.

I'm not defending the idiotic law that gives the man in the thongs the keys to the city hall.

I've said before we should have reverted to the law introduced when I sat in cabinet, which meant that councillors and mayors had to resign to contest state seats.

Newman got rid of that law, we should have simply brought it back

We saw the debacle of Ms Strelow who was rejected by ALP rank and file members, spit the dummy and run against Labor candidate Barry O'Rourke and again get rejected by the voters.

All she did was vacate her office for a couple of weeks and slip back into the mayoral chair the Monday after the election.

It was her fourth attempt to seek higher office at both state and federal level. Yet she proclaimed to be working at full throttle for the ratepayer. Go figure.

Mr Hooper it seems to me has every right to take up office until such time as the parliament deems otherwise.

Now while that is amusing to some, assuring for some and alarming to others, reality is that it's not all doom and gloom.

For a start we will save money on a salary as he's only going to charge us $1 for his services. Some might argue that he's being overpaid at that but it's still cheaper and he will not need a car allowance.

More importantly he's in a minority. He is outvoted by the councillors.

It is easy to forget that a council meeting is a democratic process.

The mayor, for example, cannot send us broke by implementing some crazy Soviet style 'reforms' unless the councillors agree. It is easy to blame Ms Strelow for woes inflicted on ratepayers while ignoring the fact that none of the councillors, it seems, had the ability to disagree or take her on.

It's all very well for the deputy mayor to claim that the councillors have bonded together well and in the interests of the ratepayer, but the facts are otherwise.

This is not some version of Pollyanna or the Teddy Bears' Picnic.

These are well paid councillors, local government politicians, who have a duty to stand up for those who elect them. Now's their chance to prove it.

Former Rockhampton mayor Margaret Strelow.

It's time to legalise e-cigs to reduce smoking rates

Smoking continues to be the drug that kills more Australians than any other.

The best estimates indicate that smoking kills around 20,000 Australians annually compared to 6000 from alcohol and 2500 from illicit drugs.

Australia probably leads the world in reducing smoking rates. We were one of the first countries to place restrictions on advertising and include prominent warnings on packaging. We are at risk of losing that mantle, unfortunately, because of a reluctance to legalise e-cigarettes.

E-cigarettes deliver nicotine through an electronic mechanism that turns liquid nicotine into a gas or 'vape'. It allows a smoker to mimic the interaction they have with a smoke and, compared to nicotine gum or patches, it delivers the nicotine 'hit' in a similar way to a cigarette.

The best health outcome would be for people to neither vape nor smoke. Nicotine is highly addictive and, like all drugs, can have bad impacts on your health. But e-cigarettes do not contain the cancer causing carcinogens that smokes do. Lives would be saved and lives would be improved if more people quit smoking and switched to e-cigarettes.

Senator Matt Canavan says it's time for Australia to catch up to the rest of the world on e-cigarettes.

A young mum gave evidence to a senate committee this week about her switch to vaping and how it has improved her relationship with her two young children. She no longer smells of tobacco around the kids and doesn't have to pop outside all the time just to have a smoke.

The good news is that more Australians are giving up smokes for the alternative of e-cigarettes. Over the last three years 130,000 more Australians are using e-cigarettes, according to the largest national survey on drug use. And, over the last three years, 127,000 Australians have given up smoking.

The bad news is that vaping remains illegal in Australia. You can sell a vaping device and there is a limited ability to import liquid nicotine with a prescription. But it is illegal to sell liquid nicotine and, in most Australian states, it is illegal to possess liquid nicotine.

In reality these laws are not enforced and many do import liquid nicotine through online shops even without a prescription. Australia is the only developed country to ban all vaping products. We risk losing the mantle of a leader in tobacco reduction efforts.

Our 'black market' creates other health risks. Many vapers import liquid nicotine in concentrated form, often in containers without child-proof caps. Tragically a three-year old girl died in Victoria a few years ago after she ingested her mother's concentrated nicotine.

We should instead have a regulated market that imposes proper standards on the packaging of products and restricts their sale and marketing just as we do for tobacco products.

A recent major review of all of the scientific evidence from around the world concluded that "e-cigarettes probably do help people to stop smoking for at least six months".

Some are concerned that if we legalise e-cigarettes, these products could create a 'gateway' for young people to start smoking. But a recent CSIRO study concluded that "the evidence for (the gateway effect) being an important route to smoking initiation in Australia does not appear strong".

We should focus on practical solutions that can improve people's lives. There is so much evidence from thousands of Australians that vaping has helped them get off the smokes and made their lives better. It is time for Australia to catch up to the rest of the world and legalise e-cigarettes.

Curious finding by tribunal

I could not let the events of the past week or so, pass without comment regarding the resignation of Mayor Margaret Strelow.

Coincidentally, Ms Strelow, at our invitation, visited our local club on Saturday, 7 November, in her capacity as mayor to present prizes at our annual Mayoral Trophy Day.

I, as chairman, sat at a table with Ms Strelow and her husband where we offered coffee or tea and a snack of some savoury and sweet treats, which our members routinely enjoy at these events. Ms Strelow was telling me about the reporting requirements in public office when public officials receive gifts or spend public funds.

In the years since Ms Strelow has been mayor of the Rockhampton Regional Council, I have had some dealings with her and her councils. I have always found her to be approachable, helpful, honest and forthright and as far as I can tell, her approach to public office seems above reproach. In past elections, the opposition usually comes from political opponents rather than from a genuine concern that Mayor Strelow was doing a poor job. I believe, Rockhampton has been fortunate to have Ms Strelow as our mayor.

This brings me to the law which was passed in recent times about replacing a retiring mayor with the second place getter in a recent election, which I guess is a bit like what happens when a senator resigns and they are traditionally replaced by the second place getter on their side of the political spectrum.

As is frequently the case, when laws are passed, it seems the current situation was not envisaged, but I do recall someone raising the possibility of Mr Hooper assuming the role of mayor, if something untoward should occur to our chosen mayor. Mr Hooper may be a most responsible, popular and well meaning person, but he did not enjoy overwhelming support during the elections and I would say his experience in public office is limited, and I would not vote for him as mayor by choice. Notwithstanding his principled view on renewables as opposed to fossil fuels, the majority of voters of the Rockhampton Regional Council area decided that he did not have the broad experience and ability to lead an important regional area.

Now, I am no expert in these matters but it seems rather a curious finding by the tribunal if, as has been opined, the trip to India was sanctioned by the state government and I can understand why Ms Strelow refused to apologise for something she does not believe she has done wrong.

What I do know is that I have spoken to many Rockhampton residents in the last few days and everyone is surprised, some even shocked, that our mayor has resigned, albeit, on a matter of principle and a by-election is now to be held, at great cost. Once again the law is to be changed and back-dated to allow for this to occur. I have to ask, does no one examine proposed legislation for possible flaws and outcomes before voting it into law?

No doubt the recent parade of local government officials being stood down or resigning because of dubious behaviour seems to have led to the capture of a person of integrity, and the people represented by that person generally do not like it.

B. Johnston,
The Range

Not on the same page, Barry

I have just read "Barry O'Rourke will officially return as the Member for Rockhampton after the Electoral Commission of Queensland declared the seat this afternoon". I would normally have been ecstatic to hear that.

Unfortunately one of the first acts of the new Palaszczuk government will now be an act of bastardry.

Barry told me yesterday he will cast his own vote in order to vote down the law which saves the ratepayers of Rocky money by not needing to hold a by-election now Margaret Strelow has fallen on her sword.

The removal of this law is to be made retrospective and will essentially block Chris Hooper from becoming Rockhampton's next mayor. By all means change the law if it is not a good one but never should any changes to law be made retrospective!

There are a number of barristers and QCs who have called Chris today offering him the pro bono opportunity to take the Queensland government to court should this blatantly prejudiced attempt to manipulate local government law be carried out by our state government.

Sorry Barry O'Rourke, but you and I are not on the same integrity page here mate and it would appear that people from across the country are rallying in support of the underdog, you know like Labor of old used to do back in the day!

Chris Hooper is the rightful heir to Queen Margaret's throne and the establishment should just get used to it. Any retrospective changes to the law that existed when Margaret's bubble wrap burst should stand!

Uluru Statement from the Heart

I have been challenged to explain the "Uluru Statement from the Heart" and just what it means to our indigenous people. Importantly, it is directed to everyday Australians, not the government. It begins:-

"We, gathered at the 2017 National Constitutional Convention, coming from all points of the southern sky, make this statement from the heart.

"Our Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander tribes were the first sovereign Nations of the Australian continent and its adjacent islands, and possessed it under our own laws and customs. This our ancestors did, according to the reckoning of our culture, from the Creation, according to the common law from "time immemorial", and according to science more than 60,000 years ago.

"This sovereignty is a spiritual notion: the ancestral tie between the land, or "mother nature", and the Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples who were born therefrom, remain attached thereto, and must one day return thither to be united with our ancestors.

"This link is the basis of the ownership of the soil, or better, of sovereignty: It has never been ceded or extinguished, and co-exists with the sovereignty of the Crown.

"How could it be otherwise? That peoples possessed a land for 60 millennia and this sacred link disappears from world history in merely the last 200 years?"

"Surely, that is self-explanatory, and makes basic common sense. Also, hard to argue with.

Our indigenous people are merely establishing that they were here long before anyone else, and had a deep, spiritual, and abiding link with Australia.

I ask you to think about this, and will deal with some ensuing clauses next week.

Alan Bambrick, North Rockhampton

Unfair judgement of soldiers

Its crazy, Ned Kelly murders three police officers and we make him a hero, every week we hear of murderers where the accused is given all sorts of legal help.

No matter what the circumstances, young people no longer steal cars - they illegally use them, we bend over backwards to assist troubled youths, terrorists, illegal immigrants, there seems no bounds to our softer side.

Except for our soldiers, oh no, they are held to an incredible standard. We take an 18-year-old, train him to kill and then he puts a foot out of place we crucify him.

It seems we have a problem acknowledging our debt to him, so we look as hard as we can to find fault.

Of course we haven't lost a war, not to my knowledge, so really for us at home war is 'over there', be over soon, get on with life. Here in Australia, we have never known the sound of tanks coming down our street because the soldier protected us, kept the wars 'over there'.

However, the ABC has found some guy who will tell all on a incident where something went wrong, they are going search till they find a soldier who didn't act as we expect that he should.

And of course until we do we will smear every serviceman till we find a 'rogue'. The ABC will make sure they dig up some dirt, well enough to fill some quiet news week, who cares if its true or not - the ABC certainly does not.

To me the soldier went way, way beyond what was expected.

Funny, eh, we can forgive the Japanese, the Germans and whoever else took up arms against us, but not our own.

We have lived in a cocoon safe from all invaders. Let's hope it stays that way, but let us never forget that to send a 18-year-old kid to army training and expect that here will be no repercussions from the style of war they face, you are dreaming. That dream may one day become your worst nightmare.

Mavis, being a very good friend of Audrey, was there supporting her at this very sad time.

She said she will never forget the last inspirational words her husband whispered to her.

BB, D'HILL: Big loss to Rockhampton, the departure of Mayor Strelow, a real asset to the city. All downhill from here, ALP won't stop until they get control of our water. No-one else in the council has the fortitude like you. Good luck in the future.

NORMAN TIMMS: Thanks for all the sacrifices our police, medical services, SES, coast guard, fires and all civilian groups and volunteers who keep our lives and properties safe, on land, on the sea as well as in the skies. Do these people get any fringe benefits like the politicians? Nope? Food for thought.

WONDERING WALLY: Thousands of people world-wide have been affected, some much more seriously than others, by climate change. World-wide, government leaders have been listening to scientists with regard to Covid-19 and await a vaccine. Why are government leaders (particularly in Oz) not prepared to listen to scientists with regard to climate change which can affect the occupants of planet earth much more than Covid-19?

JON, PARKHURST: I certainly hope in the upcoming by-election for a replacement mayor we have a new younger candidate with fresh ideas, not anyone on council now. The new 30 million art gallery, levee bank, imported tiles for river bank, pie in the sky V8 supercar track and $25 million airport in the middle of nowhere would have been approved by the mob we have now.

ANON: The LNP don't learn, a new leader and a new Team Newman member, and why David did you state on 10 News 13/11/2020 you have only one enemy, the Labor Party? We need politicians that will work together.

GK, ROSSLYN BAY HARBOUR: Re: Inaccurate weather forecast article, 12/11/20. Mr Timms, I am a government mariner and if you checked Monday's weather I think you must have been looking in the wrong area. I was out there in it and BOM's forecast was spot on.

DRUG TEST CALL: Rockhampton city councillors, I would like to see random drug testing done on all proposed new mayors and councillors. Then continued after election, like they do on sports people. They never know when they will be tested. They get an excellent salary in excess of many people.

Paper-free options

By Abby Hayes, Tanby Garden Centre

The war on plastic is nothing new for the locals of Capricornia; we meticulously clean our beaches, we treasure our reef, and we carry our keep cups with pride.

As we turn away from plastic and search for guilt-free alternatives, we wonder if there will ever be a safe and non-destructive method of single-use anything.

We know plastic is the enemy, but it seems paper isn't much better in terms of deforestation and the devastation of thousands of animal habitats.

The eco-warriors at Tanby Garden Centre have leapt towards total sustainability by introducing an all-natural, compostable and 100 per cent paper-free alternative to plastic water bottles. iamnotpaper is an Australian initiative that takes agricultural waste that would otherwise be disposed of and transforms it into PlantPulp.

PlantPulp consists of leftover wheat stems, husks and straw, textiles, flax fibre crops, and the list goes on. The result is a plastic-free, paper-free, tough and biodegradable cup.

Recycling only goes so far, and it takes a whole lot of water and chemicals to complete the process.

These revolutionary cups can be composted at home, and they only take around eight weeks to completely break down.

Then they can go back into the soil and the cycle continues. This means no pollution in our waterways, no unnecessary waste, and no risk to our animals.

Susan Head will be special guest speaker at the ADFAS Rockhampton Inc, AGM meeting.

Speaker a fine choice

Susan Head, accomplished lino-cut (relief printing) artist and president of the Emu Park Art Gallery, will be the special guest speaker at the Australian Decorative and Fine Arts Society (ADFAS), Rockhampton Inc, AGM meeting on Saturday, 28 November.

Susan was born at Rockhampton and completed her tertiary study in Visual Art and Design at Rockhampton TAFE.

She relocated to the Capricorn Coast in 1992, after returning from the UK where she had been living for several years.

Susan is an active member in the local art galleries in Yeppoon and Emu Park.

She has been president of the Emu Park Art Gallery for the past five years, while maintaining her art practice in print making.

She said lino-cut (relief printing) has been her choice of art form for many years, but she has been consistently perfecting her craft and producing new works this since 2007.

"Living on the coast with access to the sea and coastal environment has contributed to the imagery in my prints. More recently, botanical subject matter has been my focus," Susan said.

"When creating artwork, I take realistic forms and convert them into stylised shapes and patterns with an emphasis on line and colour.

"I continuously see patterns in nature and in objects around me, which I interpret and respond to through the lino block printing process.

"This process unfolds as the steps are undertaken: drawing the design on the lino, carving the lino, printing the carved block and the revelation of the printed piece," she said.

Over the years, Susan has been inspired by the relief printing (lino and wood block) work of artists, Cressida Campbell, Margaret Preston, Hilke MacIntyre, Angie Lewin and Jane Walker.

"They are among my favourites," she said.

Since 2003 Susan has taken part in multiple art exhibitions, both local, state and overseas.

She works also feature in the CQUniversity Art Collection, the Biloela Regional Art Gallery Collection, and in private collections in Australia and overseas.

Susan's informative and illustrated address will follow ADFAS Rockhampton Inc's annual general meeting at 10.30am on Saturday, 28 November, at Frenchville Sports Club, Clifton Street, North Rockhampton.

Susan is also donating a piece of her beautiful work to be raffled on the day, and a plated morning tea will follow her address.

Due to Covid-19 restrictions bookings are essential. Please email ADFAS secretary Janet Gentle on janet.gentle@gmail.com or phone Bernadette Hunt on 0438 642 778.

Oak Tree Retirement Village's Seniors Expo was open to residents and the public.

Oak Tree hosts a mini expo for seniors

Oak Tree Retirement Village at Barmaryee Road, Yeppoon held a Seniors Expo at the village recently - although due to Covid it was a mini expo with a limited number of stallholders.

Village manager Jenny Brown said there had been a good response the public in attendance.

"The aim of the expo is to give not only our residents but the public a one-stop shop for information on the day," she said.

"Some of our stallholders were Hearing Australia, Envigor Care Services, Livingstone Shire Community Centre, Bra-ology and the QCWA to name a few."

Entry was free and there were some very excited winners in the lucky door prizes which were drawn throughout the day.

"We are hoping that we will be able to hold our Normal Seniors Expo in August 2021 which normally has over 40 stalls. So please keep your eye out for it," Ms Brown said.

Kestrel a challenge

Disruptive year for U3A

BIRDS IN OUR WORLD

KEITH IRELAND

The nankeen kestrel doesn't actually build a nest preferring to use hollows in trees like the one pictured, dug out areas in the side of a cliff, ledges of buildings or even abandoned nests of other birds.

While walking across an open piece of ground, looking for birds one day, I was fortunate enough to see a nankeen kestrel enter a hollow in the side of a high dead tree.

I guessed it was nesting when it didn't come out again immediately.

There was no way to get high enough for good photography without getting scaffolding and erecting it nearby.

I contacted a photography friend of mine who was only too pleased to join me, so we built our structure from the ground upwards.

At the top, we made a platform to sit on and enclosed this with bags and hessian as well as place a roof over our heads.

I was able to keep an eye on the nest over the next couple of weeks and finally, saw one of the adults bringing food back.

The following weekend we started.

Climbing to the top of the scaffold wasn't easy.

One of us had to climb up first, lower a rope to which one lot of photo gear could be tied and pulled up.

After the second case was up, my mate could then come up as well.

We knew the first time one of the parents

The nankeen kestrel preferring to use hollows in trees instead of a nest.

arrived that we wouldn't be getting any photos of them with the babies. The hollow must have dropped well down into the trunk so the babies were always out of sight.

We did get some great photos of the parents at the opening so that would have to be a plus.

U3A Rockhampton and District Inc Update

U3A Rockhampton and District Inc was established in 1987 to facilitate active minds and bodies in older people, through the many activities and courses that are offered are run by members.

The club has a membership approaching 500 people.

During 2019, the club had over 30 activities available to members.

However, this year has been very disruptive and it has been very difficult to maintain any of our activities and meetings.

The good news is that, at present, there are 13 activities that are available for our members to attend. Please note that you must be a member to participate in these activities.

The website lists all of activities, newsletters, membership enquires, and other links to important items, to assist members, and anyone interested in joining U3A.

Looking to a positive future, the club intends to have an Activities Expo on the first Monday of February 2021. This will provide an opportunity for the various activity groups to showcase what they do for members and guests.

Government regulations existing at that time will determine how we are able to present this expo.

Please enquire through the contacts listed below as U3A moves forward to a new and exciting 2021.

Can I change the locks?

FAMILY LAW

WITH PAULA PHELAN

When going through a separation, it's very common for one party to reside in the matrimonial home and for the other party to leave.

If you remain in the property, it's reasonable that you would like to maintain your privacy and stop your ex-partner from accessing the property. Whether you can stop them is a different question.

The answer as to whether you can change the locks on the property you are living in can depend on who legally owns the property.

If the property is rented

You would need to obtain your landlord's permission before doing anything to the property.

Landlords, however, cannot unreasonably withhold their consent. You may be obligated to provide a spare key to the landlord or any other tenants if you change the locks.

The property is owned by one party

If you own the property you have the right to change the locks. If the property is owned by your ex-partner you would need to seek their consent before changing the locks or at least ask them to return their key.

The property is owned by both parties jointly

Both owners have the right to change the locks. However, if you change the locks, your ex-partner is entitled to regain access to the property without your consent.

Can the court step in?

The courts have the power to decide on who is to live in the property. They will look at the reason as to why you want to change the locks

Following divorce it is reasonable that you would like to maintain your privacy and stop your ex-partner from accessing the property.

before making an order for sole occupancy. It will be important to consider whether the other party has anywhere else to live or whether they've have already moved out. Arrangements around the collection of their property from the residence will need to be addressed.

If there are safety concerns for any occupant or concerns as to damage to property a court will take this seriously.

A Magistrates Court has the power to assign sole occupancy to one party during domestic violence proceedings through an ouster order.

The Family Courts also can make decisions about who occupies the property - either in the short term or permanently.

If a court has given an order to this effect, you can change the locks regardless of whether you own the property or not. If you are renting you still need to discuss this with your landlord.

Real estate is booming

By Jackie Dobson

The real estate marketing is booming on the Capricorn Coast, so much so that agents cannot keep up with demand.

Professionals Principal Kev Doolan said it was almost as if people have started to panic buy.

“We’ve had numerous people from southern states buying houses, land, units and rural properties,” he said.

“Unfortunately, however, there is an acute shortage of stock due to the interest rates being so low.

“We’re having trouble getting listings as people are holding onto their investment properties.

“They’re not selling because they have nowhere to reinvest their money to get an earning.”

Mr Doolan said the rental market vacancy rate was also zero.

“If we put a property online, we’d receive at least 20 applications overnight.

“People are continually calling and emailing asking about rentals.”

Rental prices have also gone up significantly in the last 12 months.

“In Zilzie Bay, for example, rents have gone from $260 to $380 per week.”

Mr Doolan said people from other areas are coming here because property prices have been far too low and they’re situated on the coast.

“The market is very strong and there is an acute abundance of buyers.”

Mr Doolan believes house prices will stabilise as there are quite a number of projects happening in the area.

“We’ve got Rockhampton Ring Road, Stanage Bay Road Upgrade and Great Keppel Island Redevelopment, to name a few.

“There is an abundance of work here.”

Pinnacle Wealth Solutions CEO Tony Beardmore said he’d been coming up to Central Queensland for work for the past 12 years.

“We started getting more and more of our business up here, rather than on the Gold Coast, and we started to seriously consider purchasing,” he said.

“We started to think about where we would go if we were to move up here and one of the areas that really stuck out was the Capricorn Coast.

“We looked at projected growth in the area, we looked at the potential opportunities available and we looked at housing prices and how they’re undervalued.

“The area is a hidden gem.

“Obviously the house prices have moved up since January/February when we first made our move, but they are still very under priced in comparison to elsewhere.

“At the Gold Coast, it used to take me 15, 20, 30 minutes to get out of my apartment block just to get down the road.

“Here, there are no traffic lights, you can be in town in a few minutes, the shopping centres are close by, there are three golf courses I can choose from and there are a number of beaches just up the road.

“We have fallen in love with the place,” he said.

Professionals Principal Kev Doolan said the market is very strong and there is an acute abundance of buyers.

Remembrance Day at the

On Remembrance Day, Gracemere and District RSL Sub Branch Inc. culminated two years of a project with a ceremony involving the planting of a Gallipoli Pine Tree to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the end of World War I.

All the local schools were involved, and MP Barry O'Rourke and Cr Ellen Smith were there to help the children and several other people "turn the soil".

In 2019, a plaque was made with the idea that it would eventually be mounted at the base of the tree, so the sub branch invited Mr O'Rourke back on Remembrance Day 2019 for the unveiling of the plaque - unmounted.

This year, the sub branch held a Tree Naming Competition, the winner of which was to be named on ANZAC Day, but due to Covid-19 regulations the presentation was postponed to Remembrance Day.

Jack Sheridan from Westwood State School was the overall winner with the name "Galakubra". The best entries from the other four schools were Yelayna Schmid from Stanwell State School, Isabella Armstrong from Gracemere State School, Katie Murray from Waraburra State School, and Oliver Stewart from St Paul's Primary School.

All the children were presented with a winner's certificate plus a medalet, which is a replica of one which was produced for distribution in 1919 when the peace treaty was signed.

The original medalet was in recognition for the role all children played in helping the war effort by collecting recyclable material, and knitting socks for the men at the front. Distribution of this medalet was tasked to those responsible for organising peace celebrations in their state, however these celebrations were hampered by the Spanish Flu epidemic, as well as a national seaman's strike causing insufficient coal which in turn created power shortages.

School children up to the age of 14 years old (or 16 years old if war veterans' children) were presented with their medallets by their headmaster and pre-schoolers were presented by the mayor.

As well as Jack being presented with his certificate and medalet, his name and the tree's name are displayed on a small plaque on a plinth. The beautiful sandstone plinth was most generously donated by Reece Gough of Capricorn Sandstone Quarries, Stanwell for which the sub-branch are most appreciative. They are also grateful to Tom Wyatt for his donation of the tree which is now just visible above the plinth. If you visit the site, you will see the plaque inset into the top of the plinth relating to the history of the tree.

TOP PICKS OF THE WEEK

FRIDAY MUM

ABC, 10pm

While there are some of the usual tropes (dumb blonde, angry curmudgeons, hapless son), Mum offers a beautiful mix of heart and humour as it follows the middle-aged and recently widowed Cathy (Lesley Manville) as she makes the tentative steps towards a deep connection with Michael (Peter Mullan), who has remained long-silent of his love for her for the best part of 40 years. Tonight, Cathy and Michael's Easter Sunday plans are thwarted

MONDAY

THE GREAT HOUSE REVIVAL

SBS, 730pm

The beautiful gift of renovation shows is in their ability to sweep up us in the drama of pondering which bathroom tiles speak most to us, which shade of eggshell white is more welcoming and, the eternal question: to water feature, or not to water feature? The seemingly trivial becomes essential and in so doing, pulls us away from the constant drama of the world at present. In tonight's finale, host Hugh Wallace follows a restoration of epic proportions as couple Carolyn and Michael and brother Henry attempt to bring life back into an 1850s Regency-style mansion in Ireland. The property, last used as a hotel, has deteriorated with disuse, but the trio are determined to make it a home. be topped.

SUNDAY

THE BLOCK

NINE, 7pm

We've sat by and watched – and judged – these hardworking pairs for months as they smashed, sanded and decorated their way through their renovation dreams. It all comes to a crunch tonight as the completed homes in Melbourne's bayside suburb of Brighton go under the hammer. While we are taken on a trip back through the contestants' journeys this season, nerves are high as the winner is revealed by hosts Scott Cam (avoand Shelley Craft. Can fan favourites Jimmy and Tam take the prize? Their 1950s renovation has won most of the competition, but will its boldness be too much for the bayside buyers? Don't miss it.

SATURDAY

THE LORD OF THE RINGS: THE RETURN OF THE KING

SEVEN, 730pm

!Peter Jackson's epic trilogy gave movie fans one of the most thoroughly engrossing spectacles ever to have graced a cinema. Picking up from The Two Towers, The Return of the King sees the original Fellowship still fractured, with Frodo (Elijah Wood), Sam (Sean Astin) and duplicitous Gollum (Andy Serkis) making their way to Mount Doom. Meanwhile, Gandalf (Ian McKellen) tries to thwart Gondor's senile wannabe king (John Noble), while king-proper Aragorn (Viggo Mortensen, pictured with McKellen) tries to raise an evil-smiting army. A magnificent conclusion to a cinematic saga that will probably never be topped.

By Liam Emerton

The Rocky Photo Club's champion of champion photos have been selected with three winners in the Opens, Masters and B Grade categories.

It's been a massive work in progress with this year being a challenging year for many clubs and organisations throughout the region, but the club has maintained focus to produce some of the best work in recent memory.

The Rocky Photo Club's three winners were Gordon Worley (Opens) with Dune, Emma Baynton (B Grade) with Pier into the Distance, and Glenda Worley (Masters) with Painted Hills.

The three sublime photographers had their pieces judged along with all the monthly competition winners, second and third places.

The photographs were judged by three independent individuals, with a lecturer at CQU in Creative and Performing Arts Patrick Connor, Professional Photographer specialising in weddings and real estate photography and a past club member Rebecca O'Grady and professional photographer specialising in commercial and marketing photography and a past club member John Casey choosing from the best of the best.

Rocky Photo Club president Rex Boggs said it's been a great year despite all the disruptions.

"Even with Covid the number of photos going into the competitions haven't changed at all," he said.

"Often we are still getting around 30 photos, especially in the Opens category.

"The competitions have been good and the standard of the photos, according to the judges, was so impressive.

"They said that it was amazing and to have to pick between just one of the photos was extremely hard."

Mr Boggs said the judges first went off the impressive nature of the photography before turning their attention to the smaller details in the piece.

"PSQ, the Photo Society of Queensland suggests that the most important thing is the 'wow' factor," he said.

"In other words, when you're looking at a photo for the first time does it grab at your heartstrings.

"And if it does then that is a good photo, full stop.

"That's what our judges were doing, so the wow factor was number one.

"In the end, it comes down to the last four or five photos and then the judges at that stage that's when they pick out the smaller details.

"In the end, it usually comes down to slight technical differences which can decide which is a champion photo compared to that one.

"The wow factor is number one but the technical factors come in at the end."

Also announced were the most consistent photographers throughout the year, Open - Scott Reynolds, B Grade - Emma Baynton, and Masters - Greg Tungate all winning their categories.

"We have eight monthly competitions and everyone gets a score for an individual month," said Mr Boggs.

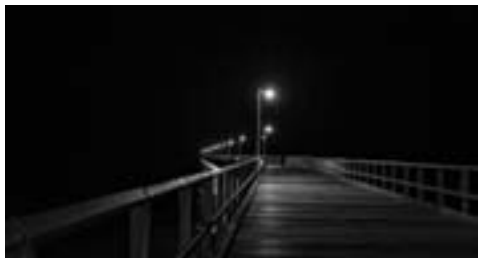

"We used to add it up over the eight months and the person with the most points would be the winner.

"But the problem with that was that if someone missed a month due to travelling or became sick - all of a sudden seven scores are compared to eight scores and eight always won.

"So we changed it last year that you have to put photos in for at least five months and if you put it in for eight, we took the best scores.

"So people are still expected to put consistent photos in but you now don't need to do it every month.

"Emma, Scott and Greg were all great at putting photos in and all worthy winners."

B Grade Champion of Champions Emma Baynton with Pier into the Distance.

Opens Champion of Champion Gordon Worley's piece 'Dune'.

Masters champion of champions Glenda Worley with Painted Hills.

Critical graduate program

Five young regional Queenslanders have taken the first step in a career in the mining industry.

They are the first group of graduate engineers to join Bravus Mining & Resources' Carmichael Mine and Rail Project as a part of the Future Leaders program with CQUniversity.

Bravus Mining & Resources CEO David Boshoff said he hoped the young people would go on to become successful leaders across the resources industry.

"We are delighted to welcome the graduates to our business, especially now when the mining industry is helping our regional economies recover from the impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic," Mr Boshoff said.

"This is an amazing opportunity for these four civil engineers and one electrical engineer. They will help complete our mine and rail project and be part of sending the first coal from the Galilee Basin overseas to provide energy to people in places like India who may have never had access to electricity before.

"Graduate programs like this are critical for our organisation, critical for our leadership in the industry, and also for our economy during these difficult times."

Nearly 400 graduates applied for the unique program, which bolsters the traditional on-site work experience with a range of academic and leadership classwork delivered by learning partner CQU.

CQU Dean of Health, Medical and Applied Sciences Professor Michelle Bellingan said that the partnership helped the university with its mission to develop opportunities for regional students.

"When we are looking at institutions to partner with, it is important that they are like-minded," Professor Bellingan said.

"Certainly with this particular program, Bravus has shown they want to grow their leaders, who can then support growth in the regions.

"I see this as a win-win combination, and certainly a plus for the region."

The cohort visited site for the first time last month to gain an understanding of the Carmichael Project and how they'll be involved.

Graduate engineer Harmon Singh said seeing the project first hand had had a big impact on his perceptions of the program.

"When you come out to a mine you think everything is going to be done, but then you realise we're still in construction phase at the moment and seeing how big everything is, how big the equipment is, how much progress they've made is really inspiring," Mr Singh said.

"The first six months I've been told is going to be learning the project and learning what everyone's going to be doing before we get into the nitty gritty technical stuff, which is really good to get an outside perspective as opposed to being stuck behind a desk all day."

Graduate engineer Jonathon Brennan said that combining the academic work and real-world experience was going to be valuable, and something he was looking forward to.

"Seeing how it all comes together and putting everything into place will be quite interesting," Mr Brennan said.

"Being able to be a part of that process is probably the thing that I'm most excited for."

The graduates went straight onto a seven-day roster as a part of the program and have enjoyed their first taste of mining camp life.

"It's as good as home," Mr Singh said.

"You've got your own bed and your own room, they've got a gym there, a lot of the things you need to be ready for a day at work."

The graduate program runs for 18 months, with graduates earning credit toward a Masters of Business Administration (MBA) while working in operational and technical roles on site.

GPC's leading technology

An Australian-first technology designed by Gladstone Ports Corporation (GPC) to improve ship-loading operations is rolling out this month at the RG Tanna Coal Terminal wharf (RG TCT).

GPC's Operations Systems team have been working on the online interactive tool, which displays a real-time view of coal loading onto vessels.

The technology will feature in GPC's Digital Twin Decision Automation system along with 60 other digital components, which can track movements of trains and dozers as well as communicate with customers and record data.

The ship-loading feature shows the vessel capacity, with live loading targets and guides operators for accurate blending.

It's expected to streamline the supply chain process by giving a real-time view of processes to operators, planners, supervisors, and agents.

Acting CEO Craig Walker said the technology was all part of GPC's 50-year vision to create brighter prospects for future generations and maximise trade through the port.

"As Australia's premier multi-commodity port, we're always striving to set a global standard," Mr Walker said.

"Our Operations Teams have been contacted by some of the world's biggest mining and technology giants to help them develop a similar automation system.

"It's humbling to see we're leading the way when it comes to port technology and it's critical we continue to develop systematic and sus-

Tank the first of its kind

By Peter Lynch

Recently I was invited to Nu-Tank, in the Parkhurst Industrial Estate, on the outskirts of North Rockhampton, to watch the installation of their new 'A' shaped overhead crane, with a rise in the middle - the first of its kind in Australia.

At 30 metres in length, it is fitted with 2x5 tonne hoists and custom cooling fans.

Weighing 13 tonnes, it was a two crane job moving the overhead crane off the semi-trailer and into the shed, behind Nu-Tank's office.

The overhead crane had to be millimetre specially engineered to move over Nu-Tanks rather unique tank making machine. Unique in that I learnt that there are only three of them in Australia and Nu-Tank was the first in Queensland to install one.

Their new tank making machine complements an existing but smaller machine, making Nu-Tank one of, if not the only, poly tank manufacturer in Australia to have both machines at the one site.

The larger machine enables Nu-Tank to 'cook' their tanks, including their big 10,200 gallon water and molasses tanks, in a computer controlled oven.

Why the big deal about cooking in an oven? To my surprise I found out most other tank manufacturers make their largest tanks over an open flame pit, a bit like camp cooking.

And you know what happens with camp cooking if you don't evenly distribute the heat - the walls of your damper are either burnt or soft, something you don't want when holding 10,200 gallons (nearly 46,000 litres) of that most precious liquid asset - water.

It was not just the big 10 twos, as they are called in the trade, that can be made in the new oven, but cartage tanks, including Australia's biggest single moulded cartage tank, able to hold a massive 18,000 litres.

"This is a market we want to get a bigger slice of," said Nu-Tank managing director Stephen Trail.

Cartage tanks are used by many industries including rural, mining and civil construction. Local Councils being a major cartage tank customer.

"Our challenge is to get the decisionmakers in these industries, including at the Rockhampton Regional Council, to start buying the local manufactured cartage tanks not southern ones," Steve said.

"We have made the significant investment to be able to supply a superior product that can hold 400 litres all the way up to 18,000 litres and they are all produced, along with our tanks, feeders and troughs, here at our Parkhurst factory.

"We deliver tanks throughout Queensland but, with the investment we have made in our latest tank making machine and overhead crane, we have the capacity to produce more tanks and create more jobs."

To think Rockhampton has one of the biggest most modern tank manufacturing plants

Nu-Tank managing director Stephen Trail with Gert Burger from NQ Cranes, who installed the overhead crane.

Nu-Tank's 'A' shaped overhead crane, with a rise in the middle, is the first of its kind in Australia.

in Australia was certainly an eye-opener to me. Here is a local owned business that has been steadily growing since it stated in Parkhurst 12 years ago, investing back into its business, including its people, manufacturing arguably the best poly tanks in the world, using a rather simple formula of using only the world's best raw materials and machines.

Sandstone business is

By Matthew Pearce

Covid-19 may have hit many businesses hard, but Capricorn Sandstone Quarries is nearing the end of one of its most successful years.

The Stanwell company's product goes to state capitals like Brisbane, Sydney and Melbourne and as far afield as Western Australia.

But general manager Reece Gough said the local market was where it's at.

"The last six months have been record months for Capricorn Sandstone Quarries, with all the subdivisions going ahead which require sandstone for retaining walls and quarry material," he said.

"I think the HomeBuilder grants have spurred land development which has been good for us as we supply the land developers."

Covid has also provided a boost to the interstate market.

"In the wealthier suburbs in Sydney they've been unable to travel so they're now spending that money on their homes, on extensions and new builds."

Capricorn Sandstone's Power Station Road quarry has been in use since the 1880s. The business itself has been there for 26 years and they're not looking at going anywhere anytime soon.

"The reserve we're on is 200 acres, and we've also got the mountain next door under a new mining lease so we'll be here for many more decades to come," Mr Gough said.

Capricorn Sandstone Quarries supplies a wide range of clients including schools, charities, landscapers, construction and excavation, streetscapes, landscaping companies, government projects and parklands.

"Everything here is custom made, from a 10mm pebble all the way up to a 10-tonne block. We have ranges from landscape quality all the way up to AAA restoration grade," Mr Gough said.

Big projects for the company include the Capricorn Sandstone Quarries general manager Reece Gough looks at the last edition of Industry Today with CQ Today's Peter Lynch.

Queensland Parliament House restoration, the Australian-American memorial at Canberra, as well as Kirribilli House and Admiralty House in New South Wales.

"My father had quarries down south and we first came up here to CQ to look at stone to supply the NSW Government to match Sydney sandstone," Mr Gough said.

"The real good quality local stone, the likes that built the Customs House, is similar to old Sydney sandstone.

"You could say there are little bits of Rockhampton all over Sydney now."

Mr Gough said Capricorn Sandstone Quarries believed in investing in modern equipment, having a good resource and training the right people.

"The demand for quality Australian products and manufacturing is on the way back," he said.

"In the past it's been hard to compete with China but especially now, after Covid, people want to know they're getting a product that's been ethically sourced and environmentally responsible - that there's a face behind the stone they're getting.

"There's a real push for a quality local product."

This sculpture of a bull's head is a favourite of Capricorn Sandstone Quarries, who have resisted attempts of admirers to buy it.

Defence contracts ready

By Matthew Pearce

A new military training area is being constructed at Greenvale in North Queensland and Central Queensland businesses can get in on the ground floor.

CPB Contractors has been appointed to deliver the first phase of works, with hundreds of jobs expected to flow.

On successful completion of the development phase of the $23.5 million contract, CPB Contractors will deliver $800 million in facilities under the Australia-Singapore Military Training Initiative (ASMTI).

The project's construction workforce is expected to peak at 350 workers, as part of the Greenvale Training Area's major works.

Advance Rockhampton executive manager Greg Bowden said it was great to see an Australian company awarded such a significant defence contract.

"ASMTI is an important initiative from the Australian Defence Force and Singapore Armed Forces to further develop training grounds within regional Queensland."

He said Rockhampton businesses had been working closely with Laing O'Rourke to deliver ASMTI's $880m Shoalwater Bay project, with 77 per cent of the contracts in the delivery stage of the project coming from the local region.

Mr Bowden encouraged CQ businesses to stay up-to-date with the progress of the ASMTI Greenvale project and register their interest on the tender portal - austender.gov.au

"Our local businesses have earned the experience by contributing to the construction at Shoalwater Bay and their learnings will be advantageous when tendering for work on the Greenvale project."

He encouraged local businesses to make contact with his team to ensure the region remained at the forefront in the delivery of significant projects such as ASMTI.

"My team at Advance Rockhampton work closely with representatives from the Australian Defence Force and Singapore Armed Forces, Laing O'Rourke and CPB Contractors," he said.

"Rockhampton is fortunate to have a diverse, quality array of businesses throughout the construction, manufacturing and engineering sectors and I personally would like to see our businesses continue to grow their own reputations plus Rockhampton's."

Defence Minister Linda Reynolds said the contract marked a significant milestone for the ASMTI.

"These advanced training areas being delivered under the ASMTI will benefit the ADF and the SAF, while enhancing our bilateral relationship and providing significant local economic opportunities for North Queensland," Senator Reynolds said.

"When this initiative reaches maturity, up to 14,000 SAF personnel will conduct training in Central and North Queensland for up to 18 weeks a year for 25 years, which will provide enduring economic benefits to the region.

"This initiative will be key to bolstering growth and supporting local jobs in North Queensland as the economy continues to recover from the Covid-19 pandemic."

The ASMTI will see a total of about $2.25 billion in work roll out in North Queensland and at the Shoalwater Bay Training Area.

Construction of the major project works is due to commence in mid-2022.

Additional early works packages to be delivered between 2020 and 2022 will include fencing and signage, contamination remediation, and construction of firebreaks. These packages will range in value from $50,000 to $4 million.

Classic look is still fresh

Today we're concentrating on a stylish look that's been around for more than 60 years, yet still looks fresh; a white shirt and blue jeans with sneakers.

One of the people to first feature this ensemble was a young Marilyn Monroe in the 1952 movie Clash By Night, where she wore her dark indigo jeans cuffed, with a collared white short sleeved shirt and dark sneakers. Her fresh faced beauty and the tomboy nature of the look helped to make denim popular among young women everywhere.

Now in 2020, a white shirt and blue jeans ensemble still catches the eye, as you can see in these photos.

We have Ann Jarrett from Rockhampton with her version of the look wearing her pair of distressed jeans cut-off with frayed hems and a comfortable loose fit.

Her white linen blouse is a very cute peasant style with a gathered tie at the neckline, and the half tuck at the front reveals a really cute bright patterned waist sash that adds an unexpected pop of patterned orange and white. Ann's style is relaxed and comfortable with her white sneakers finishing off her look, and accessorised with big gold hoops and gold bangles.

Mackenzie Leeson shows another equally chic way of combining a shirt with denim. Her blue jeans are also distressed around the knees, but they are a slimmer fit and have been cuffed to show more ankle.

Her white shirt has been left untucked to better show off the front insert design of the shirt, but the sleeves have been cuffed to make the outfit look more casual.

White sneakers are really having a fashion moment at present, and Mackenzie added a striped version to her outfit.

Gold hoops and a bangle were her accessories of choice as well, along with a simple gold pendant. The cute surprise to her outfit is the navy and white polka dot headband which tops off the look.

The beauty of this outfit formula is that you can make it unique to you by choosing a shirt and jean design that best suits you and by adding an element like Ann's belt or Mackenzie's headband that's a little unexpected or surprising.

If you'd like to know more about better expressing your style or finding out the colours that best suit you, contact me at Imagine You for a consultation.

Tips to grow hydrangeas

With their beautiful showy flower heads and tropical appearance, it has always been thought that hydrangeas really only prefer cooler climates. However, they can be quite successfully grown in Central Queensland with just a little extra care.

Many people around Central Queensland still associate hydrangeas with hospitals, as they have been used as landscape plants around many of our country hospitals and nursing homes.

I can still remember the beautiful display of hydrangeas growing at the old Eventide nursing home in Rockhampton.

Hydrangeas like a cool, moist situation, preferably on the southern side of the house out of the wind, or where they do not get too much direct sun, as hydrangeas can tend to get sunburnt when in full sun as indicated by a browning of the flowers and or foliage.

Prepare the soil with plenty of well-rotted animal manure or compost, which will break down into humus and keep the area around the roots moist and open.

The soil is of particular significance to hydrangeas because its acidity determines the colour of the flowers. If your soil is acidic, that is that it has a pH of around 4.5 to 5.0, the flowers will be light blue to electric or even peacock blue.

However, most soils in our area are much less acidic and this is the same for just about all garden soil mixes. In this soil type your hydrangea will flower pink. If you want to change the colour of your plants, just the right amount of lime (one tablespoon per plant) will make the plants produce pink flowers, but just a dash more is likely to kill the plant.

To obtain beautiful deep blue flower heads, add aluminium sulphate. In fact, hydrangeas are one of very few plants that actually accumulate aluminium. This is released from the acidic soils and through a internal process in the plant forms to give the plant the blue flower colour. You must change the soil pH before flower buds form if you want to change their colour so treat the soil after August.

An important note is that all white cultivars remain white regardless of the soil pH.

It is important when planning a hydrangea garden that it is not positioned near any fresh concrete as merely the seepage of lime from the concrete can be hazardous to the plant.

A way of getting around this is lining the garden area with a root-guard material.

This is similar to the products that are used to prevent invasive-root trees from spreading under foundations, and can be readily sourced from most building supply firms. By using this to surround your garden, it will effectively create a large planter-tub environment. As hydrangeas prefer solitude and react badly to competition from other shrubs, another benefit from the root-guard is also guaranteed.

Hydrangeas don't like to dry out too much and will wilt when they need watering. A bucket of water a week should be enough to keep them going in warm weather.

Give hydrangeas growing in the ground a deep soaking once or twice a week. Plants in pots need daily watering and it's a good idea to have a saucer containing water under the pot.

Feed them in June with complete fertiliser. They have fibrous roots close to the soil surface so mulch is recommended.

It should always be noted that, while you may select a beautiful blue or pink hydrangea in a nursery, when it flowers in your garden, it is possible to be a completely shade or even colour.

Overall, hydrangeas are really tough and will survive almost anywhere, even in a windy coastal spot. Despite the hard work required to prepare the ideal hydrangea garden, the beauty of this plant makes the effort worthwhile.

Hydrangeas are commonly grown at country hospitals and nursing homes.

Rural Matters

Put the kettle on for John

The Queensland Rural and Industry Development Authority is here to help Central Queensland primary producers looking for financial assistance.

As a local, regional area manager John Metelli said he had extensive knowledge of CQ industries to help drive on-farm developments.

"Having worked with producers to carry out important on-farm developments such as property and infrastructure upgrades and diversification, I have helped them boost the productivity of their farm business," he said.

"I've helped farmers with a variety of development projects from upgrading water or fencing infrastructure to carrying out succession plans by helping the next generation buy into the family farm."

John encouraged primary producers who are interested in developing their farm business to contact him to discuss their needs.

"The aim of the First Start and Sustainability Loans are to help primary producers achieve a more productive and profitable enterprise, and with summer and higher rainfall coming, it's timely producers get in touch to see how they can improve their operations," he said.

"It's important not to self-assess. You could be cutting yourself short of a great opportunity.

Every farm business is different and it's important to have the conversation together about your individual business needs.

"If you've got a development project in mind, put your ideas forward and we can discuss what options are available to you, your While John's office is based in Rockhampton, John covers the Central Queensland region.

"I'm ready to meet with primary producers

CQ region feels the heat

By weather forecaster Mike Griffin

Rockhampton soared to 36.6C and temperatures climbed to 40C west of Gogango on Sunday.

It was the hottest day in eight months. Temperatures have been six degrees above average with 35.5C on Saturday, 36.6C on Sunday, 34.3C Monday and 35.5C on Tuesday.

The sudden heat surge slowed many people down. Outside workers were affected. What about the poor roofers?

After travelling the Emu Park Road to the beach, the car thermometer went from 37C in Rocky, 36C at the JBS turn-off, 35C at Nankin, 34C at Tungamull, 32C at the Cawarral turn-off, 30C Yeppoon at the turn-off and 29C on the beach. An eight degree temperature fall.

Many people on the beach enjoyed the NNE breeze and vista views of the islands. Then a plunge in the 26C water cooled to 25C about 50 metres out. Relief at last!

The choppy seas, wind gusts 50-55kmh and the fishing closure kept most boaties away.

The heat extended across the Tropic of Capricorn into Western Australia, and north into the Northern Territory recording 42-43C and the odd 45C.

Victoria, NSW and South Australia recorded maximums over 40C inland.

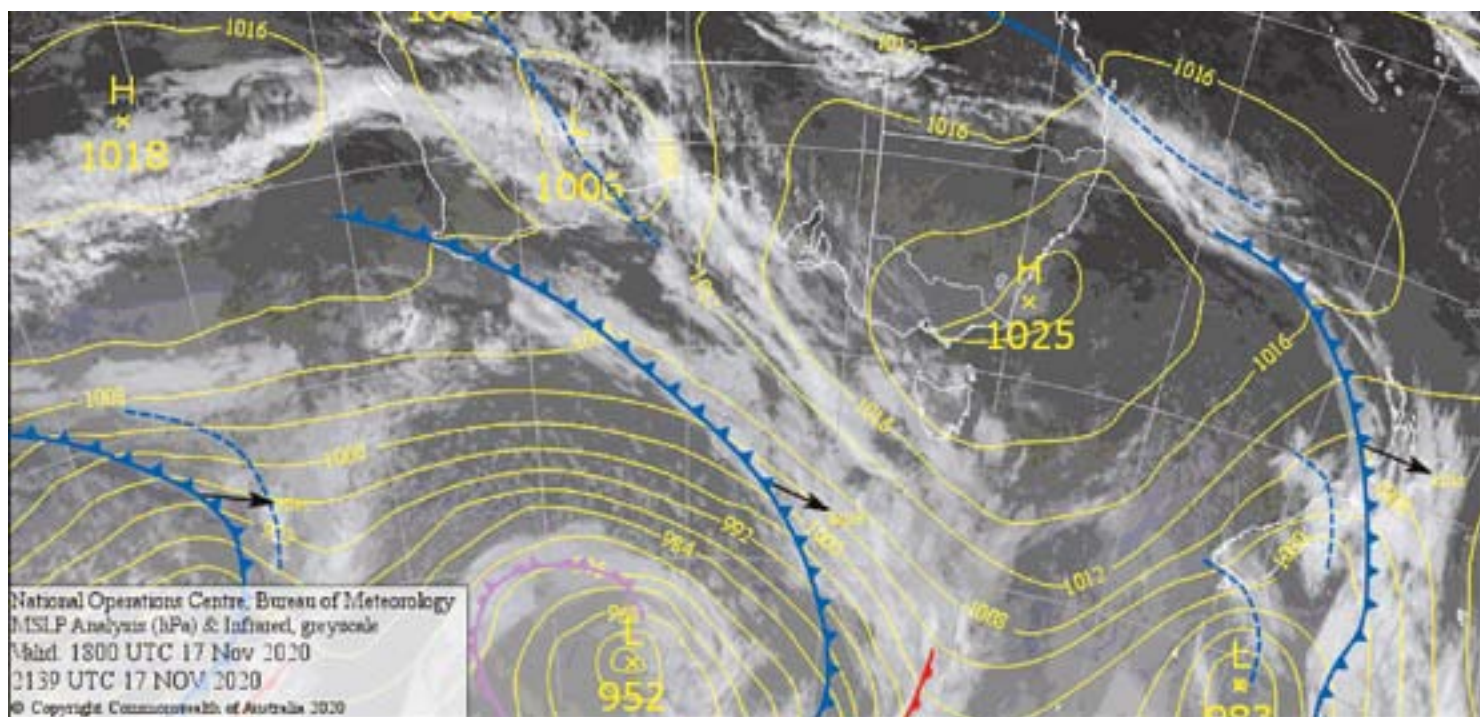

Darwin recorded 10 days of 36C or more for November.

It was all due to an inland 'heat low' affecting most of Australia.

A 'Southerly Buster' hit Sydney late Monday, causing a severe storm in Newcastle with gusts 111kmh Monday evening.

It kept travelling north, hitting Brisbane late Tuesday with storms for most of the Sunshine Coast merging into the Wide Bay and Burnett.

A storm developed on Fraser Island. Let's hope it can assist in putting out the fire that has burnt for a month. Now the surge (before going to print) is poised to hit Capricornia.

Internationally, the Philippines recorded its eighth Typhoon for the season.

After Super Typhoon 'Goni' early November, Typhoon 'Vamco' hit last weekend. It caused at least 40 deaths and floods for northern parts of the country. This is the 21st such storm for the season. Typhoons are equivalent to a Category three or four cyclone.

November is normally when cyclone season starts in Australia. There is some debate about it. If our northern neighbours have more typhoons than normal then Australia could follow suit?

FORECAST

The South East Trades Winds (SETW) return Wednesday with coastal showers.

The winds extend inland bringing welcome relief from the heat. The Apparent Temperature (AT) will be around 28C. There is a chance of a storm around Calliope and Mount Morgan, which could trigger activity along the Capricorn Highway to Emerald and maybe Shoalwater. As the 1025Hpa high on the Synoptic Chart ridges into the Tasman, it should keep the SETW along most of the Queensland coast for the coming four to five days. Winds tend more moderate easterly by Sunday. Then light NE early Monday. Great for the boaties! So be out early and back by midday as the sea breeze will be rather strong after midday.

Tuesday could be the best morning but the sea breeze will gust over 25 knots (46kmh) ramping seas up to 1.5 to 2 metres inside an hour. If a low develops in the Tasman Tuesday a trough could develop from Brisbane to Longreach.

This will cause temperatures to rise over 35C (put heat stress measures in place) in Rocky ahead of storm activity to the south. Isolated storms from Bundy to Biloela and Springsure may reach Capricornia Wednesday. These storms could be dangerous, with gusts over 90kmh (boaties beware!) and will hopefully give us good rain.

Rest in Peace

Out in the deep with Dags

By Darryl Branthwaite

Living in the Gladstone region certainly has its benefits, with having rich off-shore and in-shore systems especially when its blowing hard enough to blow a dog off its chain, like recently, and the start of this week was in complete contrast.

Alas, many of us had to work. This weekend we have the approaching first quarter of the lunar phase, with the tidal run reducing but unfortunately the wind isn't playing the same favourable game with it still sitting around the 15 to 20 knots from the ESE.

This will certainly prevent many from venturing too far from shore, but on Saturday, at the time of writing, the prediction was that the wind might drop off in the morning until about lunch time.

It's ideal for fishing that incoming tide. The inshore fisheries of Pancake, Rodds Harbour, Collo, the Boyne River, the harbour and all the creeks and feeders to that system will be fishing well.

As you all know, targeting barra in the salt water system is forbidden and if you are deemed to be doing that the authorities will prosecute.

But at present there are plenty of other species to chase, like mangrove jack, finger mark, king and blue nose salmon, whiting, bream, and - if you are fortunate enough to find some reef to wet a line - the inner harbour spots of Manning Reef, Rat Island and the Oaks are producing some excellent pelagics along with solid grassy emperor and other reef species.

The poor old parrot gets a hammering as there are plenty of them caught right across the region, but they play such a crucial role in the reef's ecology.

Often referred to as cockies or gravel trucks, these fish eat the dead coral or clean up the coral and shoot it out their "you know what", which in-turn makes sand and turning that into our coral sandy beaches.

They are also a very versatile table fish, with brilliant white flesh which can be pan fried, deep fried or cooked in the oven. Not all species are good for everything. At the end of the day, however, we need to treat the gravel trucks with a wee bit of respect and only take what we need, looking after the rest.

There are many charter boats operating out of the Gladstone region, from hourly guides through to full day fishing charter to extended charters to the Southern Great Barrier Reef and beyond.

Pictured here is Chris Trevor, affectionately known as CT, holding up what is arguably a 40 kilogram-plus GT on the back of one of those charter boats.

He was telling me he struggled to lift it for the photo, and young mate the decky was helping cradle the fish's head so that it wasn't harmed in any way.

They had gone to great lengths to look after this monster with irrigating its gills as soon as it was brought aboard, then carefully lifting it for the photo before returning it to the water - forgetting to weigh it. Pfft! If they didn't have the photo it'd be just another fishy tail. Cracker fish, CT!

With only another four or so weeks until Christmas, it's time you all started to plan what the Christmas Day feast would look like in your house.

Seafood in this region is still the favourite, with whole baked trout lined with seared scallops, shucked oysters, topped with bugs and surrounded by red spot prawns.

Makes your mouth water doesn't it? We'll, it's time to plan that and go hunting and collecting.

Collect your own scallops and oysters, go and pick up a couple of crays, slip out and catch that four to five kilogram coral trout or red emperor, and put your order in for five kilograms of locally-caught prawns or a box of red spot off your favourite seafood supplier.

Have a cracker weekend, and flick me some photos.

Hooroo, 'Dags'.

Hooked Fishing Charters have supplied us with some great actions shots from across the weekend.

BITS’ brilliant men’s open

By Liam Emerton

The Boyne Island/Tannum Sands (BITS) Golf Club hosted its annual Men's Open on Saturday with a roaring 65 players attending.

The day was fought out between A, B and C Grade competitions, with the A Grade champion separated from the runner-up by just one stroke.

Scott Gibbs, who represented Calliope Golf Club, finished on par with 72, while A Grade runner-up Stephen Dietrich ended the day with 73, finishing on one-over par.

CQ Men’s Golfer of The Year announced

By Gurney Clamp

Biloela's Dylan Parish has won his first men's CQ Golfer of The Year event, finishing the year with a total of 85 points in the A Grade division, winning the event by nine points. Yeppoon's Ben Swaffield (76), Damien Ling (75), and Daryl Myles (54) finished in second, third and fourth place respectively.

Yeppoon's Mark Swaffield scored a comfortable win in the B Grade division when he scored 61 points, winning the event by 23 points from Wowan's John Gunzler (38) and Emu Park's Ray Richens (33).

Boyne Island's Shane Kitching recorded 76 points to win the C Grade division by the huge margin of 34 points from Duaringa's Ian Edmestone (42 points), with Yeppoon's Chris Green a further point back on 41 points.

On the track with Tony

By Rockhampton Jockey Club CEO Tony Fenlon

G'day - this is Tony.

It's been a very busy week for the team at the Rockhampton Jockey Club, with races held on Tuesday, and of course again next Sunday.

With as much as $180,000 up for grabs, the club's Sunday eight-race TAB program is looking good.

Sunday's meeting is actually the first of our Christmas race meetings.

We have planned a two-course festive luncheon ($27.50) in the air-conditioned members Lounge from 12.30pm.

The Members, as it is known, is a terrific spot to watch all the action as it overlooks the birdcage area where the jockeys and trainers meet before the hoops are legged-up for their rides.

It gives everyone a really good chance to assess the horses as they parade pre-race.

The Christmas season theme will also be promoted for our two race meetings in December - Saturday the 5th, and Friday the 18th.

Speaking about The Members, some years ago it was remodelled and renovated as a multi-purpose facility.

Once buildings on a racecourse were constructed for use more or less for race days only.

However, like so much in our racing industry, that has all changed.

With the advent of racing being televised into the lounge rooms, pubs and clubs Australia-wide, race clubs had to look for new revenue streams to offset falling attendance figures income.

For instance, The Members at Callaghan Park is the venue for all sorts of social gatherings - including wedding receptions and celebrating the lives of loved ones after their funerals.

The RJC's functions co-ordinator Kelly Suli and her team are really kept on their toes, putting together parties, send-offs, celebrations and reunions for a long list of special occasions.

"We had two functions last weekend and a number of Christmas parties are coming up over the next month," Kelly said.

"It is a lovely setting, particularly of an evening with the racecourse under lights."

She said some limited weekend non-race day dates were still available, as well as race day packages and mid-week non race day dates.

"Some people love to celebrate an occasion with the novelty of a race meeting happening on the day. We take care of everything for you, from decorating to catering as well as drink packages to suit every style and budget," Kelly concluded.

Who would have thought that when racing commenced at its present location at Callaghan Park on 2 June, 1898, it would become far more than just a racecourse?

By the way, if any reader is interested in acquiring knowledge about the history of Rockhampton racing, we have just the book for you.

Horse racing was born in Rockhampton in 1868, and the RJC commissioned a book with some wonderful pictures and stories celebrating 150 years of racing in 2018.

It is available from the RJC offices for $20 and would make an ideal Christmas gift for not only a racing follower but anyone interested in the history of Rockhampton.

HOW game is Master Jamie? The Graeme Green Callaghan Park four-year-old ran the race of his life at Doomben last Saturday with a fighting third in the Keith Noud Handicap (1200 metres).

In a mad helter-skelter affair, Master Jamie had to be gunned out of the barriers and was always in the firing line up close in the classy field.

For him to keep on fighting and only be beaten a nose for second by Deep Impact was nothing short of outstanding.

Afterall, race winner Jonker, which won by 4.5 lengths, carved out a new Doomben track record of 1 min:7.38 seconds, which amounts to low-level flying.

Graeme has done a magnificent job with Master Jamie, winning 10 races as well as recording four placings for $362,475 in stakes.

It seems a formality that any time soon Master Jamie will overtake that memorable grey filly, Paradis Imperial ($379,975), as Rockhampton's greatest stakes earner for a horse entirely trained from Callaghan Park.

Of course, Rockhampton's greatest stakes winning horse was Our Boy Malachi, originally-trained at Callaghan Park by John O'Sing before transferring to the Hawkes operation in Sydney.

That great horse won a staggering $946,400.

What a horse was Our Boy Malachi!

HOPE you had something on the grey Fly For Yulong (IRE), which was a tearaway winner at the Mackay TAB races last Saturday.

I mentioned him as a horse to earn some holiday expenses from in last week's column.

Locally owned by Central Queenslanders Mark and Lydia Withers and his trainer Jared Wehlow, Fly For Yulong is off to Townsville on 28 November for the $50,000 final of the Coral Coast Shield Cup over 1609 metres.

On present form he will do Rockhampton proud up there.

I thought Better Reflection, on face value, disappointed first-up last Saturday at Doomben. I wouldn't at all be surprised if she doesn't bob up sometime soon at Callaghan Park and atone.

SEE where former Rockhampton lass and successful jockey Zoe White has had some rides in country and provincial South Australia since moving over there last month.

Zoe was due to ride at Strathalbyn this week but she did a place-getter at Murray Bridge in Ngairre last week.

Sonja Wiseman was also planning to move to Adelaide later this month.

Sonja had a busy few days last weekend, riding winners at both Emerald (Friday) and Mackay (Saturday).

The club wishes both Zoe and Sonja the best of luck in South Australia.

GOOD to hear that Gracemere trainer Jim O'Shea has retained those two very close stablemates Barachiel and Spring Creek.

Members of the trainer's family raced the pair on leases, which expired just a week back.

The pair was put up for auction on an online site. I believe Barachiel fetched $18,000 and Spring Creek $16,000.

Barachiel, another good grey, was runner-up to Ricky Vale trained Absolut Artie (also a grey) in this year's Rocky Cup.

YET another grey was in the news at Mackay races last Saturday.

Six-year-old mare Annmarie won the Maiden there at her 41st start.

Annmarie did most of her racing around Rocky when trained by Angela Stephens, who trained her to win the bulk of the $48,875 alongside her name.

Annmarie is now trained by Ian Shaw in Mackay, and is raced in new ownership of his family members.

Bulls charge to the top

By Liam Emerton

The Capricorn Challenge had an intriguing round of action on the weekend, with three teams getting up with strong wins.

The Frenchville Falcons soared over the Port Curtis Cavaliers, the Cap Coast Parkana took a bite out of Rockhampton Brothers' momentum, and the Gracemere Bulls charged out in front of the competition with a huge win over The Glen.

Saturday's results meant that Gracemere took the reigns on top of the table when they defeated The Glen by an incredible nine wickets.

The Glen won the toss and elected to bat, giving Kris McDonald and Kade Horan a chance to shine with the red ball.

McDonald picked up a solid 3/10 off 3.2 overs, while Horan secured 3/36 off eight overs as the Bulls bowled The Glen out for 153 runs in the 39th over.

Luke Johnstone top-scored for the Bulls with 58 runs off 55 balls and team mate Mark O'Keeffe knocked up a half-century with 54 runs off 66 balls as the side secured a bonus-point victory, winning the match by the end of the 23rd over. Todd Harmsworth picked up an impressive 34 runs off 17 balls.

In the second match of the day, the Frenchville Falcons dismantled the newly-formed Port Curtis Cavs, winning by eight wickets at BITS Oval.

The Cavs opened the batting but could only manage 56 runs as the Falcons bowled their opposition out by the 34th over.

Chaice Bidgood (3/14 from eight overs) was the best with the cherry for the Bulls as teammates Sam Chew (2/4 from three overs) and Dane Bidgood (2/8 from six overs) made notable contributions.

It was then Chew who led with the bat, smashing eight fours as he accelerated to a rapid-fire 45 runs from 26 balls.

Chew was eventually caught out by an outstanding diving effort from a Cavs' fielder off the bowling of young starlet Lachlan Allan.

That was Allan's second wicket of the contest but it was too little, too late for the Cavs as Bulls pair Brent and Lachlan Hartley scored the final runs.

Frenchville Falcons opener Sam Chew flicking the ball towards fine leg in his terrific batting performance on Saturday.

In the third and final match of Round 4 of the competition, the Cap Coast Parkana picked up a victory over the Rockhampton Brothers at the RCG on Saturday.

Brothers won the toss and sent the Cap Coast side in to bat, where the side made 163 off 39.4 overs.

Asher Colley was the best of the travelling side's batsmen, scoring 33 from 49.

Brothers' Julian Harris, Riley Connor, Mackenzie Ralphs, Rion Banks and Tim Reid split the 10 wickets evenly amongst each other.

Connor was then the best with the bat for Brothers with 64 not out from 84 balls, but it was not enough to get his side over the line.

The Brothers' club finished agonisingly close to the 164 required, falling short by five runs after running out of overs.

Harry Mulville was handy with the ball, finishing on 2/13 off 6.1 overs.

This weekend will see Round 5 of the competition, with The Glen hosting the Frenchville

Falcons, Capricorn Coast Parkana taking on the Port Curtis Cavaliers, and the Gracemere Bulls challenging the Rockhampton Brothers.

That will be the final round of the competition until 2021 with the sides entering the T20 Competition.

That competition will run for five rounds before the finals are hosted mid-December.

All six Capricorn Challenge sides are scheduled to compete in the T20 competition.

Star Central Queensland juniors shine at Rugby cup

By Liam Emerton

Central Queensland's best junior rugby stars took to Mackay on the weekend when the sugar capital hosted the Nyrie Contor Cup.

Rockhampton's Colts and Brothers rugby clubs, Yeppoon's Cap Coast Crocs, the Gladstone Goats, and the Emerald Rams took junior sides to Mackay last Saturday which hosted teams from the under-6s to the under-17s.

Central Queensland's biggest success came in the form of the Gladstone Goats under-12s, which finished the cup undefeated from four games.

Their first match was against Rugby Capricornia rivals, the Cap Coast under-12s, which was a tough and tight battle.

The Grufcs and Crocs battled hard and eventually, the Goats were able to win 20-12.

The second match of the day for the Grufcs was a less competitive contest, with the side smashing Nogoa 31-0.

Backing that performance up, Gladstone took down Mackay 36-0 in an impressive display of both offence and defence.

Their final game saw the Goats match up against the Whitsundays under-12 side.

With an undefeated tournament in mind, the Grufcs outperformed their opponents to secure a 19-5 win and the under-12 Nyrie Contor Cup championship.

Those results meant the side scored 106 points while conceding just 17 across four games - including two clean sheets.

Coach for the under-12 Goats Peter King said it was a great day and he was pleased with his side's performance.

"We managed to get four wins in the competition, and because there were no finals they tallied up the points at the end of the day," he said.

"Overall we made 106 points and only conceded 17 points and that's how we managed to take out the overall winners.

"Individually we have a lot of kids coming from a Rugby League background.

"We showed them how to play a bit of Rugby Union before but they managed to pick it up very quickly.

"They showed how good they really were.

The Gladstone Goats under-12 side won their overall competition at the Nyrie Contor Cup on Saturday.

"For us and our under-12s to win the competition, it was just really great."

There was plenty more success to come for the Grufcs on the day too, with under-16s Bronson Noble, Trevor King and Rhys Chadburn playing for the Whitsundays.

King also managed to win Best and Fairest for the entire under-16 competition, which cemented the Grufcs' successful Saturday.

There was a great alliance shown between two Central Queensland teams when Uili Lemalu battled as part of the under-14s Colts.

Some Colts under-12s also joined as part of the winning Grufcs side, which made for a great union on the day.

The Colts under-14s had a strong day with two wins, a draw and an extremely unlucky loss with Clancy Hohn winning the under-14 player of the carnival.

The Cap Coast Crocs under-10s and 12s sides had a great day out, picking up some strong wins.

CQ Aquajets get tropical

By Liam Emerton

Swimmers from across the CQ region dove into the annual Tropics Swim Meet, hosted by the CQ Aquajets Swim Club.

The event was the first held by the Aquajets since the enforced Covid-19 break and saw similar numbers to last year's meet - despite added restrictions and regulations.

The overall number of swimmers from clubs around the district was slightly down, but the numbers grew when Gladstone South Swimming Club came to the pools for the meet.

The host club had 11 swimmers compete across 40 races, with 27 personal bests attained, along with six silver and seven bronze medals.

The Aquajets also picked up four state qualifying times - one of the many reasons that the event was held.

CQ Aquajets president Gary Knight said it was a phenomenal day and the club was happy with the turnout.

"It was a different event this year because of the Covid restrictions," he said.

"We couldn't have any spectators and anyone there had to be doing a job.

"Other than that, it ran very smoothly and there were some pretty great swims overall.

"A few swimmers qualified for state, which is great."

Knight said the event had very similar numbers to previous years and it was great to see the Gladstone South Swimming Club come to the meet.

"It was around the same people as last year," he said.

"In general most teams were down on last year.

"But we had Gladstone South come up, which brought the numbers back up to around about the same as last year.

"With the restrictions, the coaches are usually just focusing on events that qualify their team for state.

"And that's good because it means all of them can swim good and do the best they can do."

The Aquajets had a strong hit-out in the pools at their Tropics meet, something which Knight was really proud of.

"We've been rebuilding for a while now," he said.

"We've got a lot of young kids coming through and learning the ropes.

"It was great to see them race and get some great PBs.

"Toby is 15 and he's been swimming for a while, and he had a two-second PB in his 100 freestyle.

"It was good to see those sorts of things happen and the concentration on skills that the guys have been working on is showing off."

Knight said it was the first time the Aquajets had hosted this season, and they took a lot of pointers from previous Covid-restricted meets.

"We traditionally have a meeting at this time of the year," said Knight.

"This was our first meet since the Covid restrictions.

"But we weren't the first meet since Covid came in.

"Two weeks ago Caribee Swimming Club hosted Beef City.

"So we watched that fairly carefully and how that was run, what they did and made adjustments.

"Once the day turned up, everyone did what they had to do and it was really, really good."

Knight told CQ Today that the club has had to pull back on some of its competitions this year, but he has still seen the swimmers develop across this season.

"For our club, we've wound back our competitions this year," he said.

"We've focused on skills and worried about that this year.

"Normally there's a meet at Emu Park in early December but that has sadly been cancelled."

The 2020 Queensland Championships are set to be held on 12 December, with a possible CQ event being held before those important events.

Rockhampton team falls just short in Bundaberg

By Allan Clarke

The annual battle for supremacy between the Rockhampton and Bundaberg table tennis associations that started 50 years ago in 1970 went down to the wire last Saturday night and Bundaberg's players cashed in on their home-town advantage to wrest the Eric Cree Shield from their northern counterparts.

On Saturday, members of the Rockhampton club travelled to the Rum City to participate in inter-club team matches in a celebration of the 50th year since the two associations have been taking part in competitive activities on an annual basis.

While Rockhampton has won these contests 10 times over the past 12 years, the seven-team contingent for 2020 narrowly failed to bring the trophy home with them when they lost by a solitary rubber in the match that made the difference.

In the first and second divisions, Rocky won both contests when the two-person outfit of Joel Coughlan and Matt Pettett easily prevailed over Brett Fourro and Anushka Mudauge, as did Rayden Smith, Dane Coughlan and Matthew Steffen over Peter Spratley, Kaine Ryan and Braydon Chapman. Rocky did not drop a rubber in either match but some ended with results that were quite close.

The third section showdown saw James O'Sullivan, Jeff Green and Erica Nolan get off to a bad start to be in deficit by five rubbers to one, before they staged a great fightback when pitted against Andrew Udal, Jacob Baker and Lorraine Fourro. Unfortunately, the Rocky trio went down 6-5 in a clash that had many opportunities to go the other way.

Darren Green made a comeback in fourth division, joining Nick Green and Allan Clarke for Rockhampton, and they got off to a good start over Kane Chantarat, Peter Poldervaart and Dave Delpratt when they led 5-0. Bundaberg staged a mini-revival in winning the next three rubbers, but Rocky won all of the last round of singles to post a solid 8-3 victory, on paper.

The Division 5 contest went the home club's way by seven rubbers to four when Rashed Aziz, Matthew Udal and Travis McDermid combined well to be just too strong for Rocky's Dave Milverton, Chris Leitner and Geoff Geddes. Pretty much as expected, it was one-way traffic in the seventh section when Bundaberg's combination of Hannah Sunley, Natasha Jefferson, Tia Zia and Kingsley Parrott were far too strong for Rocky's Colte and Phill Nolte and Ian Coombe.

The clash that made all the difference, and was the last one to finish - which highlighted the fact that the overall challenge stood at three matches apiece - was the sixth division showdown. Bundaberg's Vinuka DeSilva, Steve Ricketts and Delece McDonald staged a solid comeback victory over Rocky's Emily

Peter Marris, the president of the Bundaberg association, receiving the trophy from Allan Clarke, the president of the Rockhampton Table Tennis Association.

Steffen, Linda O'Sullivan and Patricia Green, who probably had their chances when leading by five rubbers to three late in the encounter.

The final round of singles saw Ricketts narrowly win over O'Sullivan in four close sets before DeSilva downed Green three straight. This created a 5-5 situation with the 14-year old Steffen having to beat seasoned veteran McDonald for the shield to travel back up the highway. In a very exciting clash, McDonald won the opening set 12-10 before the youngster levelled with a comfortable win. The next two games were shared to create a 2-2 situation and in the deciding game McDonald was the victor by a few points to receive a very noisy reception from her club-mates.

Next generation steps up

The newest generation of Tannum Sands lifesavers has officially graduated with flying colours.

The under-14 age group has spent the past two weekends at the Tannum Sands Surf Club, participating in an intensive Surf Rescue Certificate (SRC) course run by age manager and volunteer trainer/assessor, Rebecca Devine, but for some it has been up to nine years in the making.

Surf Lifesaving Australia requires nippers to achieve their relevant age Surf Education Award each season to be eligible to compete at the Branch and State Championship surf sport carnivals.

Devine explained that six of the 10 nippers in this age group have been with the club since 2012/2013 as under-6 and 7s (referred to as Green Caps), with another three starting in 2014 as under-8s. The latest recruit joined in 2017 in under-11s.

"I have had the pleasure of being their age manager since 2013, but was involved with them as water safety in 2012, so I have witnessed them all grow and mature over the years," Devine said.

"To be able to deliver this final piece of training and assessment for their nipper program, as a group, is an honour."

While the glory of prowess in surf sports is alluring and great fun, the real value of the nipper program is in the Surf Education Award training, which covers a range of topics from sun safety, ecosurf, personal safety, mental health, physical health and wellbeing, first aid, resuscitation, signals, and a full range of surf rescue skills using rescue boards and rescue tubes.

"For this reason I think it is the best youth sport to be involved with - no other sport that I am aware of builds you up to achieve nationally-accredited training qualifications at the age of 13 and then progress to a Certificate II in Public Safety (Aquatic Rescue), otherwise referred to as the Bronze Medallion, when they turn 15; there are so many career pathways that can open up from there," Devine added.

This season saw a re-format of the SRC content, with a greater focus on radio operation and mental health awareness as well as the core skills of CPR and defib operation and performing a rescue of a conscious and unconscious patient on a rescue board and rescue tube.

The graduates will maintain their skills by undertaking a proficiency assessment each season.

The proficiency assessment ensures that patrolling members keep their skills and knowledge current to be able to competently perform a rescue without putting themselves or the public at risk.

There are still a number of proficiency as-essment sessions planned for the next month, so if you are at Tannum Sands Main Beach or Wild Cattle Creek and see what looks like a rescue, don't panic; it's just our local volunteer lifesavers gearing themselves up to make sure they can deliver the highest possible standard of public aquatic safety for the community.

Remember, if the lifesavers can't see you, they can't save you - always swim between the red and yellow flags.

'She'll be right won't save your life.'

Central Coast Car Club is ready to tear up the track

By Liam Emerton

This weekend will see the Central Coast Car Club (CCCC) of Gladstone tear up the bitumen in Round 3 of the Tarmac Motorkhana/Khanacross series.

The event will begin in the morning with a number of great drivers from across CQ already scheduled to attend the Benaraby Driver Education Facility on Saturday.

The event will be the final round of the competition, with the CCCC already completing the Dirt Khanacross/Motorkhana rounds.

The last race day that the CCCC held attracted 32 competitors and this weekend, being the final race day, will hopefully be bringing more cars to the track.

Keith Honour from the CCCC said it is shaping up to be a great day.

"This weekend is the last round of the bitumen series, which consists of Khanacross, starting at about 9am, and then we will upset the whole track and bring in the Motorkhana from around 1pm," he said.

"The last event we had seven juniors, which is a bumper crop for us, and hopefully we will have around four to five local juniors racing.

"We're looking for good numbers to finish off the year.

"And hopefully the weather will be kind to us and put a bit of rain on there."

Honour said that Covid has changed the event slightly, but it has still been a great year for racing.

"At the start of the year, everyone had to step back and stop doing everything," he said.

"We missed the first round of our series but then the regulations were relaxed a little bit.

"We had an event in June and then we got back onto our dates and our series again.

"This last one, this weekend, is a fill-in date provided for any cancellations.

"And the good news is that we have fulfilled our calendar.

"Covid didn't really affect us a lot except for the paperwork and guidelines we have to follow.

"We're not allowed to have spectators, we're not allowed to have people scrutineering - meaning people have to sign off on their own car and we're not allowed to have trophy presentations."

Honour is already looking forward to the 2021 series, telling CQ Today that the CCCC has already pencilled in some dates.

"Next year we're looking for a good year again," he said.

"We've got to set our dates, we've got a few dates set up already.

"Because the Benaraby motorsports is a big area, you've got speedway, drags, motocross, you've got us and the drifting blokes all trying to get the same weekends.

"It gets a bit dodgy when we can have it."

The CCCC held a come-and-try ladies and juniors day in February of this year and will be planning to host that again in 2021.

"Next year we will kick off at the end of February, the same as we did last year," said Honour.

"We held a bitumen come-and-try ladies and juniors only event.

"We're trying to encourage a few more ladies and juniors out of the woodwork.

"The event last year was really well attended but because of Covid, we lost that momentum.

"Next year we're looking to host that event and carry on throughout the rest of next year.

"We're really looking forward to that."
